It's a clean sweep for NDP

by LEN PIZZEY

In a pattern repeated across much of Ontario, voters disenchanted with the David Peterson's Liberal administration cast their ballots for change last Thursday, sending NDP candidate Dennis Drainville to join party leader Bob Rae in the first social democratic government ever elected in the province.

The outcome surprised the most astute political observers, and even Rae admitted he had not expected to win a majority. But in Victoria/Haliburton, there were strong indications well before the polls opened that Drainville was the front runner. Liberal fortunes in the riding were battered by disenchantment with Peterson's record of tax increases and broken promises, by the retirement of 15 year incumbent John Eakins, and by the comparatively ineffective campaign of Pat O'Reilly, a virtual unknown in the northern part of the riding who failed to inspire much confidence. The Progressive Conservatives, struggling to rise up from the ashes of two successive defeats, suffered from their third place status before the election and the fact that newly chosen leader Mike Harris had little time to establish his presence with the electorate. Victoria/Haliburton candidate Ron Jenkins, making his first try for the seat, did not display a solid grasp of local issues, and was not well known among most of the electorate.

Moments after the first returns began to flow in to the electoral office in Lindsay on Thursday night it was clear that Drainville was headed for Queen's Park. In poll after poll, he emerged well ahead of his PC and Liberal rivals, although in almost all cases, the combined vote for the Jenkins and O'Reilly topped Drainville's total. The same pattern held in most of the other 139 ridings in the province, and in the end, the NDP won a majority government with only 38 percent of the popular vote.

Final results showed Drainville with 15,499 votes, or 44.38 percent of the total. PC Ron Jenkins was second, with 8,947 votes, 25.62 percent of all the ballots cast. O'Reilly finished third with 7,688 votes, 21.96 percent. Family Coalition candidate Brad Medd received 1,419 votes or 4.06 percent of the total. Independent Hugh Boyd got 971 votes — 2.78 percent — with Libertarian Ron Hawkrigg trailing the field, receiving 417 votes or 1.19 percent of the total. There were 51,425 eligible voters in Victoria/Haliburton, and 34,921 of them cast ballots.

There was jubilation in the Drainville camp. Anticipating the victory, they had moved their headquarters to the Lindsay Legion, where, by shortly after 9 p.m., the first of the defeated candidates, Hugh Boyd and Brad Medd arrived to offer their congratulations. O'Reilly and Jenkins soon followed.

Drainville described the night's events as "history in the making". He paid tribute to what he termed "the early warriors" of the social democratic movement — T.C. Douglas, J.S. Woodsworth and others — who he said forged a vision of "a co operative Canada."

Voters said "yes to that vision, and that's miraculous, that's beautiful" the Anglican minister who resigned his duties with the church to run for the NDP told supporters and members of the press when victory was apparent.

The NDP minority predicted by many observers in the final days of the campaign "would have been a repudiation of Mr. Peterson" Drainville said. But the results showed voters "have said yes to Bob Rae."

Drainville will take a brief vacation before assuming his new responsibilities as MPP for Victoria/Haliburton.

AN NDP HUR-RAE!

garnered 44 percent of the local vote, but easily outpaced Liberal Pat O'Reilly and PC Ron Jenkins to become the first NDP candidate ever elected in Victoria/Haliburton.

Chronic care unit is 'a given', MPP says

Haliburton County will definitely get its chronic care beds now that the NDP is in power at Queen's Park, says the riding's new MPP.

"That will be a given," Victoria-Haliburton MPP Dennis Drainville said in a telephone interview after Thursday's election.

But the government must be given time to find out exactly how such a project is given the go-ahead. "The funny thing is, I wouldn't know who to call," Drainville says, still getting over his surprise at the NDP's win of a majority government.

During his campaigning, Drainville said he also heard suggestions about a "super" hospital, built between Minden and Haliburton to better serve the growing needs of the

No Ride in Haliburton

Eight-thousand motorcyclists will not be riding into Haliburton Village next June.

In a move bound to relieve people who live near Glebe Park, and anger people who want the revenue, Dysart council decided not to allow Ride For Sight to use the park for fundraising efforts.

After a somewhat heated debate, only Councillor Brian Watts voted in favour of hosting the Ride. He was visibly angry at the actions of his fellow councillors.

"I can't understand where your thoughts are. You people are making it sound like a den of iniquity," Watts said before the vote. After the motorcyclists arrive, they camp in one large area and have an overnight party to celebrate their success in raising money for eye disease research.

Referring to the people who live near the park and voiced objections in a letter, Watts said "I find it really hard to believe 11 couples are telling our council what to do with our park. They're not too bloody sympathetic about losing the $1-million it will bring in."

Some councillors questioned the $1-million figure.

"I hate to give up the money but people are more important than money," said Deputy-reeve Lloyd Leadbeater. "I think the risk of a blow up is great."

"If I was one of those people living there, I'd object," said Councillor Murray Fearrey. "I don't think it's fair to these people. . . We've got to put 10,000 bikes by their door" arriving and leaving the event.

Minden OPP Staff Sgt. Bill Elliott, who was asked to attend, later said that if there's a lot of noise on the Saturday night, neighbours need to know "it's useless phoning the police and saying there's a noise coming from the park."

As well, the police would not be patrolling on the site. "We do not police the park."

Waitress recovering from severe burns

by MARTHA PERKINS

A PineStone waitress, who suffered burns to most of her body while preparing a dessert, is now just praying for the painful healing process to quickly end.

"I'm healing incredibly well," says 27-year-old Darla Searle in a telephone interview from her Wellesley Hospital bed. "But there's a lot of pain because healing hurts. When they take my bandages off, it's like ripping your skin off twice a day."

It was terrible. Every once in a while I see myself on fire and it's scary," says Mrs. Searle, whose emotions are also in the midst of healing.

The most severe third-degree burns from the September 1 work accident are to her knee and stomach. Her arms and legs were also badly burned when her clothes caught on fire, and there are first-degree burns to her face.

The accident happened during the last hour of her last day of work at the Haliburton resort. Married in June (her maiden name is Towns), Mrs. Searle and her husband Steve were looking forward to finally being able to live together in Oshawa.

One of her fellow waitresses was busy and Mrs. Searle volunteered to help her prepare a cherry jubilee dessert. "We took the flambe pot down and I lit a match and dropped it in to see if there was any fuel left."

There wasn't, so the other waitress took a bottle of methyl hydrate from the shelf and poured it in.

"The match I had thrown in hadn't gone out," says Mrs. Searle, but the waitress couldn't see that. "I was going to say 'Just a minute' but there wasn't time so I tried to blow out the match."

It was too late. "It was like the fire came right at me. I put my arms up to protect my face. My sweater caught on fire, my skirt caught on fire. I was standing there screaming but so was everyone else. Everyone went into panic mode."

Mrs. Searle had never been taught that when someone is on fire, they should be rolled in a blanket — or table cloth, if that's more handy — on the ground. Instead, and with no one offering to help, "I ran to the kitchen sink, turned on the water and jumped in. It seemed like forever but it was probably five seconds."

Screams had alerted people in the dining room that something was amiss. An off-duty police officer and a nurse rushed into the kitchen. By this time the flames had been doused. "They grabbed me and took me to the huge bins that produce ice and they buried my arms in the ice." The officer held ice in his hands and had Mrs. Searle run her face against it while the nurse put ice on the other burns.

"This was all just pain," Mrs. Searle says of her reaction.

The ambulance arrived and took her to the Haliburton Hospital. "My husband got the call thinking I was finished work and ready to come home." From here she was flown by helicopter to Wellesley Hospital in downtown Toronto, well known for its burn unit.

Nurses there are very compassionate and understanding, Mrs. Searle says. Taking off the bandages, and showering off the wounds, is incredibly painful. When Mrs. Searle's pain threshold is reached, they let her take a brief break. But it's better to get it over with as soon as possible, she says. "They're always apologetic for hurting me even though it's not their fault."

If skin grafts are not necessary, Mrs. Searle should be out of the hospital in a week. If grafts are necessary, she'll have to stay another eight to 10 days. When released, she has to have assistance at home and receive therapy from the Oshawa hospital.

Looking back on the accident, Mrs. Searle has some questions about the circumstances. "The accident was just a misunderstanding but if things were set up differently, it wouldn't have happened the way it did."

Staff is given training about identifying the labels of flammable materials, and how they should be stored apart from other supplies. Had the methyl hydrate been locked or put away in a cupboard, however, Mrs. Searle would have had to spend a few minutes getting it. As it was, the other waitress could reach up to the shelf and pour it in the burner in a few seconds.

"I'm not upset at any of the staff at all. If someone else was on fire, I wouldn't have known what to do. I've never held a fire extinguisher in my hands. We should be shown what resources we have and how to use them."

Mrs. Searle started working part-time at the PineStone in November, 1988 and has worked there full-time since April, 1989. Not once, she says, has she received any training of what to do in case of fire. "I'm sure there are people who know what to do but it's not because of PineStone."

PineStone's manager was not available for comment.

However, response from the rest of the community have been heartwarming. "The calls, cards and prayers have been incredible. I just pray a lot, that helps me. It helps me with the pain and frustration."

ONLY A SHELL: By the time Dysart firefighters arrived at Rhys Jenkins' house on County Road 1 on Saturday night, the house was completely engulfed in flames. With the help of fireman Mark Brohm, above right, the department quickly had the fire under control. Jenkins was alone in the house at the time, and it's believed the fire was caused by a grease fire in the kitchen. Nearly all the contents were destroyed.

Enumerators miss entire parts of riding, leaving voters angry

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

As many voters found out on September 6, there were many problems with this year's enumeration process.

Perhaps as many as 5,000 people in the Victoria-Haliburton riding were not initially enumerated, says Jane Johnston, the Progressive Conservatives' co-ordinator for the Haliburton Village area. Most of the major problems were in southern Victoria County, but Haliburton County had its fair share of angry voters.

Not only did Johnston receive several telephone calls, but the PC headquarters also noticed an increase in voters left off the list, she says.

Part of the problem was the map given to enumerators. This came from the Deputy Returning Officer's office in Lindsay and was often of poor quality. The people along County Road 1 to the Haliburton Hospital weren't enumerated "because the map wasn't clear who should do that area." As well, no one at the Lindsay office is very familiar with Haliburton roads.

"Perhaps there should be someone (another DRO, perhaps) within the county," Johnston says.

There was another mix-up when a meeting was called to explain the process to the enumerators. "I had 31 people at the Legion waiting for instructions but they didn't let us know the meeting was cancelled."

Two of the people left off the list were Bruce and Primrose Birrell. The enumerator missed them, even though they have a mailbox, and 18 other houses along the Poverty Bay Road. One of the other Soyers Lake residents missed was Isobelle Moodie, a lifelong lake resident. In the Echo office, two people weren't enumerated: one on Harmony Road in Haliburton, and one on Kennis Lake.

"It's ridiculous and obscene that citizens should be disenfranchised simply because they weren't visited," Mrs. Birrell says.

When they realized they hadn't been enumerated, the Birrells tried to find out in advance if they were on the voter's list. They couldn't find a copy of the list in the county. After numerous phone calls, they were told to go to Lindsay where they could be registered, and therefore vouch for the other people on their road. (In rural areas, those not on the list can vote at the

Minden man wins lotto

A Minden carpet installer may take an early retirement now that he's got an extra $250,000 in his bank account.

On Friday morning, David Lynas was reading the results of September 5th's Encore lottery draw. He hadn't had a chance to read the paper earlier, and it wasn't with great expectations he looked over the results.

But there was his Encore ticket number. Encore is a draw run in conjunction with Lotto 649.

He phoned Sunny Variety in Minden where he bought the ticket. Told to come as soon as possible, upon arrival Sunny's owner checked the winning numbers on his machine. Sure enough, it was a match.

"It hasn't really sunken in yet," Lynas, a 60-year-old widower, said in a telephone interview from the lottery office in Toronto on Monday. "I've never had that kind of money before."

Asked what he plans to do with it, Lynas says he isn't sure. The main thing he'd like to buy is a new vehicle. A red Jaguar? No, a new four-by-four — "it will have a few toys on it."

He's also not sure if he'll retire from Riverview Furniture, the company he does most of his work for. A quarter of a million dollars takes a little getting used to.

Costs may prevent building big hospital

While this idea does have its merits, "the reality when talking about whole new 30-bed hospitals is you're talking mega bucks and I don't know if we have the money."

"Our commitment is to make sure the chronic care unit is built," Drainville says. Leader Bob Rae has also publicly supported this.

Meanwhile, Drainville says the long-term healthcare committee should continue investigating the needs of the area. "The chronic care unit is not dependent on the study's findings," he says. "It's never bad to judge the needs of the community. As far as other medical needs, the study may well bring up" other suggestions.

On another election issue, Drainville says "my concern about severance pay (for G.W. Martin Lumber workers) is very great." When the Harcourt mill shut down, it did not have enough money to pay the 120 workers their severance pay. Some solution must be found, Drainville says.

"The issues for the north of this riding are very uppermost in my mind," he says.

Tired but not surprised by win, Drainville prepares for future

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Exhausted, elated and just a bit bewildered by his new responsibility, Dennis Drainville says the one emotion which hasn't resulted from Thursday night's win is surprise.

"We had gone door to door and knew the numbers were there," the newly-elected New Democrat Member of Provincial Parliament said in a telephone interview from his home near Gooderham.

"Clearly in the north of the riding it was obvious the people's needs had not been met by the Liberals and they wanted to choose someone they felt able to fight for their needs and forceful enough to take them" to the legislature.

But up until Thursday night, Drainville, an Anglican priest, didn't know if he would be a voice crying in the wilderness of a Liberal government.

"Never in my wildest ravings did I think we'd form a majority government," Drainville says, echoing the sentiments of his leader, Bob Rae, who was also shocked by the stunning victory. This is the first time in Ontario's history the NDP has formed the government.

"It's wonderful I've been elected

— but what does it mean," says a pleasantly bemused Drainville, who must quickly get accustomed to the MPP's role.

However, provincially the NDP garnered 38 per cent of the popular vote and Drainville 44. That means more than half the people in the province didn't vote for the party.

"You can't be bothered by that," Drainville says. "You just have to accept it. But I had the largest plurality in Central Ontario."

And a vote for Drainville was not just a vote against the Liberals, he says. "We saw more than a repudiation of the Liberals. The results were a measure of a strong campaign. I earnestly wanted to know what people's concerns were. That's why I went to all the little places... For seven weeks, my wife Donna (Quance) and I worked 18 hours a day... It's hard to campaign that way, but it's important."

As well, Drainville says part of the vote was for him as a person, not a political representative. "People felt there was an alternative. Somehow I was able to articulate the issues."

After the NDP win, many people in the business community are apprehensive about having a socialist government. Rae has proposed several measures which give them the jitters, but on the night of the election, Rae said the needs of all Ontarians, obviously referring to business people, will be addressed.

"Whenever people are concerned, there's some justification," Drainville says. To ignore anyone's concerns is foolhardy for a government. "You do so at your own peril."

Yet many were angered by former Premier David Peterson's dire warnings about the NDP in the last days of the campaign, Drainville says. Peterson says that in NDP Ontario, children could starve.

Now in power, the NDP will take a serious look at its promises in context of financial resources. "Any program has to be developed within the context of fiscal responsibility. You can't just go on a spending spree."

"We are heading into some very tough times. We're in the midst of a recession, we've got hundreds of people laid off", especially in the Lindsay area, Drainville says. On Friday morning, he introduced himself to many Lindsay businesspeople. "I tried to indicate my concerns about the recession" and discussed ideas of how "we could continue to build a prosperous community."

The government has to look at "what can be done within four or five years," he says. One thing the election taught everyone was not to call an election early into a mandate.

It's evident many people expect Drainville to address their concerns immediately. "I've received scores and scores of phone calls from people telling me about their problems. But I have no secretary, no office, no business telephone. They're going to have to realize it will take time for us to get into operation."

Drainville expects it will take five or six weeks to have an established office in Lindsay. To facilitate open communication with people in other areas of the riding, one of his dreams is to have a mobile campaign office. On designated days, it could visit the smaller communities. A toll-free phone number is also desired.

When asked if he had any aspirations to be a cabinet minister in the new government, Drainville says "Mr. Rae really has a big jog ahead of him. He's got a lot of talented MPPs. If he does ask me, because of the type of person I am, I do love challenges."

"But I would be happy just to serve as MPP," he concludes. People feel comfortable talking to him, and he wants to make sure they have plenty of opportunity to do so.

Council concerned about noise, liquor for a few years, raises money for the Retinitis Pigmentosa Foundation. Thousands of motorcyclists get pledges and then ride en masse into the host village or city. They camp overnight and leave on Sunday. It has become the biggest non-governmental fundraiser for retina disease research.

But the Ride also includes a lot of drinking, and concerns about this underlined Monday's discussion.

Last year the Ride was at Trent University in Peterborough, explained Gerry German, the Ride's co-chairman. However, after the event, which attracted upwards of 8,000 people, Peterborough put a ceiling of 5,000 people if it was to host the 1991 Ride.

"We can't say 'leave your money and go home'" if the numbers surpass 5,000, German said.

Organizers have an approximately 100-member support team which takes turns patrolling the camp site. People are allowed to wander about carrying alcohol. There's a beer tent and they can bring alcohol with them.

Local organizations can benefit from getting involved. For instance, the Minden Boy Scouts picked up the bottles and cans and earned about $700 in returns, German says. A Minden church group sponsored a chicken supper, while a service club takes out the license for the beer tent. Ten to 15 per cent of net beer tent profits are given to the RP Foundation. (Later, Fearrey noted that no service club was willing to take a license for a beer tent at the Highland Games because insurance risks were too high.)

Except for motorcyclists and organizers who stay in hotels, riders are encouraged to stay at the site. The OPP is asked to have its breathalyzer unit just outside the park entrance to discourage drinking and riding.

A party and dance is usually planned for the Saturday night. "If there's a chance for an explosion, that's when it is," said Fearrey.

"The whole idea of the party is a celebration of the work they've done to raise this money," German said. "How important is the bar on Saturday night," Reeve Bill Davis asked. "It's a necessity," German replied. Watts added "You can't have a party without a drink."

Later, German said that people should wish for a hot Saturday. "The more they drink the faster they pass out" and then they're no trouble.

German then noted he'd like a meeting with nearby property owners to quell their fears and tell them "what we're prepared to do to see their properties are not damaged more than is necessary." Costs of damages resulting from the Ride have been decreasing, he added.

When asked for his comments, Staff Sgt. Elliott said "One problem I may have coming is the proximity of the park to dwelling houses. With 9,000 people, there may be a little noise."

Sgt. Elliott then gave some statistics on the Rides in Minden. In 1988, the breathalyzer unit parked outside the Minden fairgrounds laid 14 impaired driving charges. In 1989 there were 26 charges. This summer, without the Ride, there were five charges that weekend. The corresponding numbers for liquor seizures are 8, 16 and 2.

In council's discussion following the presentation, Watts said the Ride would create less noise than the Bluegrass Festival. As well, he says he has roughly 1,000 people at his Rip's Sleep Hollow campsites "and most of them go to bed at midnight."

It was then pointed out that Saturday night's bonfire is not put out until 1 a.m.

"Times have changed" since the Ride was held in Minden, Watts said. "They learn from their mistakes." When Fearrey asked if Watts would like the Ride at his campsite, Watts said "I'd love to have it here, I'd love to have the revenue."

"If we turn it down, there's got to be a long-term policy for the park," Councillor John Parish said. Council needs to decide what events are appropriate for the park.

A motion put forward by Watts agreeing to host the Ride was passed around to the other councillors, none of whom offered to second it. Councillor Dorothy Baker questioned why a decision had to be made right away. "I want to talk to more people."

"They didn't want them in Peterborough and (the 5,000 ceiling) was the way they got them out," Fearrey said. If Peterborough, and its police force, couldn't handle that many motorcyclists, Fearrey wondered how Haliburton could.

"They left Minden because Minden couldn't supply the (required) area. Don't shove me no crap," Watts said.

Fearrey forced the vote by seconding the motion to host the Ride. Once "on the floor", council had to vote on it. Watts voted in favour; Davis, Leadbeater, Fearrey and Councillor Bob Nichol voted against; Baker abstained.

Ride talk to be 'kept off the streets': Reeve

In an interview after Monday's council meeting, Reeve Bill Davis was asked why the Ride for Sight delegation was not on the agenda. If it's not on the agenda, there's no public record that says it must be addressed at that time.

"That is a relatively good question," Davis initially replied.

The Ride proposal was first discussed by the Recreation Committee, he said. "The rec board wanted it done in confidence with council rather than making it an issue on the street."

On Friday, he says he asked the municipal clerk if the delegation, which had been asked to attend council in advance, was on the agenda. She said no and Davis says he did not ask to have it included.

"Maybe I'm respecting the wishes of the rec committee," Davis said. "I have grave doubts about the way it was done... If it's a matter of public interest, delegations should be on the agenda."

Friday night, the Ride was discussed at a meeting of Bayshore Acre residents, which surprised Davis. The residents then drafted a letter stating their objections to the Ride coming to Haliburton.

Davis said he was going to address the issue of keeping the issue quiet at the end of the meeting but there wasn't time.

"We wanted to keep it low key," said recreation chairman Bob Nichol after the interview with Davis. If council said no, that would be the end of it. If council said yes, then there would have been full public consultation.

Nichol added that the decision on where to locate the Highland Games was debated through the papers. (The efforts of both Minden and Haliburton to host the Games became controversial.)

SPREADING THE MESSAGE: Saturday was International Literacy Day and the Haliburton literacy agency celebrated by taking their message to the main street.

Because they wanted to attract people who can't read, the display also included a taped message, coming from behind the mannequins.

Mobile mammography makes prevention easier

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

Preventative medicine has been made a little bit easier for the women of Haliburton County.

Every Wednesday morning, a large white van pulls up beside the Haliburton Hospital. When its door opens, Donelda Warren, a registered radiology technician, will steer women through the process of getting a mammogram.

A mammogram is "an x-ray of the breast that can show cysts, cancers and other abnormalities so small that they cannot be felt," explains a brochure Mrs. Warren gives to each of the women.

the x-ray — and drinking caffeine drinks, such as coffee or tea. Caffeine can make breasts sensitive and to ensure the best results, the mammogram machine compresses the breast. "This is uncomfortable if your breasts are tender, but only for a few seconds, and it helps give high quality films with minimum radiation," says the brochure.

"You can miss so much without the compression," Mrs. Warren adds.

The level of radiation is less than that used by dentists and is directed only on the breast. As an extra precaution, the woman wears a lead "collar" around her neck to protect her thyroid glands.

Peterborough for a routine checkup," Mrs. Warren says. Once a woman reaches menopause, it is recommended she get a mammogram every one or two years. However, 15 per cent of Mrs. Warren's patients are of different ages and three per cent of those are men.

It's not known why breast cancer is so prevalent in our society. At a recent conference, Mrs. Warren met a mammographer from Yellowknife, Northwest Territories. She says there's only been one case of an Inuit woman there having breast cancer. In Australia, people get more colon cancer and in Japan, the most common is stomach cancer.

The mobile mammography services are available every Wednesday morning at the Haliburton Hospital. When proper electrical hook-ups are provided at the Minden Hospital, the service will be provided there as well. The Ministry of Health pays for all costs through OHIP.

"In the last three years, the improvements in technology are really remarkable," says Donelda Warren, who every Wednesday morning does mammo-grams in a van parked outside the Haliburton Hospital.

"In this day and age, if you find a lump it's not the end of the world. Even if it's malignant, the prognosis is good."

One in 11 Canadian women get breast cancer. The earlier it is detected, the more successful a woman is at overcoming it.

"Most women are just petrified if they find a lump," says Mrs. Warren, whose easy-going and warm manner helps calm fears. "But in this day and age, if you find a lump it's not the end of the world. Even if it's malignant, the prognosis is good."

Not all lumps are malignant, or cancerous. If further tests show the lump is cancer, recent technologies and surgical methods greatly reduce the probability of death.

Although weekly or monthly self-examination is the best way to detect lumps early, a mammogram is a valuable preventative tool. Just as the PAP smear has become a regular and commonplace test for cervical cancer, the mammogram is on its way to becoming a routine test for breast cancer.

Like the PAP, the mammogram is a simple procedure. Once a doctor orders the test, all a woman need do beforehand is refrain from using deodorant — ingredients can block "In the last three years, the improvements in technology are really remarkable," says Mrs. Warren, who uses a Siemens Mammomat.

Two x-rays are taken of each breast: one from above and one from the side, getting as much of the armpit and lymph glands as possible. The images are processed at the hospital and sent to this area's nearest radiologist, who happens to be at St. Joseph's General Hospital in Peterborough.

If the tests show further examination is necessary, the woman's doctor will phone her. A woman assumes there are no abnormalities if the doctor doesn't phone her.

Yet most women want to know immediately what the test shows, Mrs. Warren says. "When you get a chest x-ray, you don't ask 'When will my x-ray be ready?' but there isn't a patient who doesn't ask when the mammogram results are ready."

Because small hospitals cannot afford to have a mammogram machine on site, the Mobile Ultrasound Services is an invaluable asset in diagnosing cancer.

Local contractor Greg Brown's plans for a residential subdivision on Highway 118 now include three condominium developments, nine to 12 rental units and a strip mall.

However, these will have to be put on hold until his plan of subdivision for 39 residential lots goes through all the government channels. The subdivision is south of Elstone Motors, towards the village.

Each lot has a minimum frontage of 200 feet and a minimum acreage of one acre. Roads will be built inside the subdivision and access is still being worked out.

New plans include Block A: 6 1/2 acres for three condo developments of nine condos each for a total of 27; Block B: slightly more than two acres designed for nine to 12 apartment or multi-unit dwellings; and Block C: just over one acre for "a strip mall for lack of a more attractive word" which may include a convenience store and hairstylist's salon.

When telling Dysart council of his new plans on Monday, Reeve Bill Davis said "it hasn't been our past practice to pre-zone without specific proposals." That is, if Brown wants to include the three blocks in his present submission, he would first have to come up with more site-specific plans. General usage is not sufficient. Its present zoning would not allow such developments.

Councillor Murray Fearrey suggested Brown leave the blocks out of the plan, "otherwise it will hold up your subdivision." He also noted that council has not yet decided to allow condominiums off the sewer line.

However, by doing it this way, Brown runs the risk that the people who buy the residential lots will not want the other developments. When re-zoning was applied for, they could object and take it to the Ontario Municipal Board.

"If it reverts back to residential lots, so be it," Brown said.

In the plans is a park which runs along a creek splitting the property diagonally. This is flood plain and the Ministry of Natural Resources will not allow development on it.

"Who did you plan on owning that," asked Deputy-reeve Lloyd Leadbeater.

"We're all aware of the five per cent parkland" developers must deed to the municipality, Brown replied.

"We have problems keeping the parks we have now," Davis said. "If it becomes ours, it's for everybody's use," Fearrey noted, later adding that the only way to gain access, is by crossing people's lots.

MTO petitioned for slower speeds

People coming into Haliburton may have to slow down a little.

On Monday, Dysart council agreed to ask the Ministry of Transportation to reduce the speed limits near town limits on Highway 121 and Highway 118.

Since John and Ennis Felts bought the Lakeview Motel in April, 1989, there have been three car accidents near their property, which comes after a bend in the highway.

"In our opinion these have been caused mainly by the speed of traffic along Highway 121," they say

On the edge

The victory was stunning, no less to NDP leader Bob Rae than to the voters of Ontario, who set out to register a protest against the Liberal administration of David Peterson, and ended up electing the first democratic socialist government in the province's history. It was, in a sense, an accident that the NDP gained a majority with less than 40 percent of the popular vote. Whether it will prove a happy or debilitating accident depends on Bob Rae's ability to downplay the most economically damaging aspects of the socialist agenda, while still being perceived as running a different kind of government. His personal commitment, intelligence and integrity have never been questioned, but a great many people were shaken by the NDP victory, and with good reason. Socialism is in retreat around the world. Free enterprise and individual initiative are in resurgence in eastern block countries where they have for so long been suppressed. Ontario, with the nation's most prosperous economy, is already struggling to compete in the international marketplace, its businesses burdened by high taxes and a workforce less inclined than ever to factor productivity into wage demands. Any precipitous moves to spend even more on social programmes would further erode the economic base on which prosperity, and ultimately, social justice, depends.

It is disturbingly ironic that taxes were the issue that precipitated the Liberals' fall from grace. Certainly the timing of the election was crassly opportunistic; unquestionably people were weary of Liberal arrogance and resented the spectre of a Liberal dynasty to rival that of the PC's, but the issue that brought David Peterson down was taxes. PC leader Mike Harris hammered away at the Liberal record of some 33 tax increases in the past few years. Hundreds of thousands of small business owners were outraged by the imposition of the Employer Health Tax and the message it implied — that businesses could afford anything the government might impose, and that health care is "free". The $5 tax on new tires was little more than theft, since it had no discernable purpose other than to make everyone a little poorer. And yet people responded to these assaults on their disposable income by voting for the NDP, a party that advocates even greater government involvement in the marketplace, even greater spending on social programmes, which can only be financed by higher taxes. No wonder Bob Rae was surprised by his victory. And no wonder people who believe that the best form of social assistance is a productive job, felt twinges of fear as the results were tabulated.

Fortunately, Bob Rae understands that business is not an evil force, and that profits drive the economic engine. His election night speech helped assuage the business community's fears. He advocates an Ontario in which everyone's voice is heard and in which everyone matters, a noble enough vision, but one that may be at odds with the more strident socialists among his caucus.

In Victoria/Haliburton, Dennis Drainville faces a similar challenge. He too must chart a middle course. He was elected not only because he ran a determined campaign, was the most articulate and polished of the candidates, and best informed about local issues, but because people were fed up with endless taxes and wanted change. And yet there is no instant solution to any of the area's problems. And there is no hidden pool of money to which the Liberals did not have access. Drainville has reiterated Bob Rae's promise that a new health care facility will be built in Haliburton County, but whether it will be chronic care beds planned for so long, is not yet clear. In the current economic climate such projects may not be possible, and yet if Rae does not live up to his promise, will local people once again feel betrayed?

Bob Rae has been given a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to prove that a socialist party can work in harmony with business to build a stronger Ontario. He cannot make sweeping changes overnight, and he cannot bow to forces among his own party who would pander to the greed and irresponsibility of even greater social welfare spending. He can, perhaps, be a better premier than those who preceded him. That is the essence of the mandate he has been given.

No one can remain silent

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

OUR READERS WRITE...

To the Editor:

I am pleased that the women of our community are having a "Take Back the Night" vigil because it needs to be heard that no person should be afraid of the darkness of violence. It is to be hoped that the men of the community will be listening to the message of this clarion call to end all abuse in our community.

I would only ask them to consider their language carefully. In the article printed in your paper of Sept. 5, 1990, it is stated: "Because men are not subjected to the same treatment that women are, it is not necessary for them to Take Back the Night." This is a fallacy. Ask any of our doctors, social workers, or psychiatrists if they have any cases of emotional, physical or sexual abuse of males of any age. The figures for this type of abuse of our children (both male and female) is frightening. This is the seedbed for the violence which these women say they will no longer condone. The light of these women's candles should be but the sunrise that will brighten every dark corner of violence that a true healing can begin for all persons.

Violence begets violence and we have the proof of that throughout the world according to our newspapers. Perhaps we are going to have to demand that the Ministry of Community and Social Services of Ontario must provide the necessary funds to agencies to help them in their endeavours with our children to know what is normal family life and normal sexuality. Unfortunately we cannot help all the adults who are violent unless they are willing. The only place we can start is with our children.

I am sorry that I cannot walk with my wife to Take Back the Night. At first, I must admit, I felt anger and violence within myself that I was being denied my rights to support all women and all persons to Take Back the Night. Then I realized that I was wrong. I still feel that silent support on the sidelines is not enough. We, men, must hear the message these women are making and must perhaps think about what we can do to spread this message further in our community by our action. Silence (or non-action) shows acceptance of the status quo of society today.

Can we remain silent?

Gerald Johnson,
Haliburton.

March discriminates

To the Editor:

In regards to the article entitled, WOMEN TO MARCH TO PROTEST VIOLENCE, I would like to take this opportunity to voice my opinion.

I agree that violence against women and children is a problem in our society, but it seems that we must also realize that violence against men is also a problem.

Our society has told us that men do not cry, that men are to be strong. This society has also made the abuse of men one of the most silent crimes of the century. Few men are going to admit that they have been physically abused, mentally abused, sexually abused, or humiliated.

We are told by women that men do not know what it is like. Men are the aggressors, women the victims. This makes me sick. The people who believe this, should have been with me last night when a friend came over, covered in his own blood, his nose broken and cut. He was bewildered as to why he has to be emotionally and physically abused in his own hours of waiting that the police finally said, by phone, he should go to the hospital and have his wounds attended to. Then, if he really wanted to talk with an officer, he could come down to the station and file a report. The end result was simple. Get medical attention for your injuries, come down to the station to be told that the police do not want to lay charges, and then go home.

When women want to "take back the night". I would hope that we, the men who truly support them, should be allowed to march beside them, to show that not only does society have a group of women who are sick of this abuse, but there are men in the community who are there also.

While attending the "sidelines" of last year's march, in another city, where "men were allowed to stand along the route to show support, but NOT be part of the march", I agreed to show up and show my personal support.

There I stood, showing support, while I was called an "asshole, abuser, chauvinist," and other names that not only shocked me, but truly hurt. I have supported the women's movement for years. I can personally list areas where I have openly put my own

JUST RECENTLY a film crew were in the Haliburton area filming some commercials for the Ministry of Tourism and Recreation. The commercials, when ready to go on the air, will be shown on United States television in the hope of luring people to Ontario for a vacation. While here most of the crew stayed at the Domain of Killien. They were on the move most of the time working at various locations in the Highlands of Haliburton. Barry Day of Day Airways, Haliburton had the opportunity to fly the crew from one location to the other. Boats that were used in the commercials were supplied by Haliburton Marine.

One day last week I was doing some business in the office of Whitfield Plumbing and Heating, across from the government dock, and having a short visit with Marie Whitfield and her daughter Liane. During the conversation Marie happened to look out the window and became very excited when she noticed a doe standing on the grass near the shore at the band shell at Head Lake Park in Haliburton. When I looked out I could see that the doe was in the water and swimming in the direction of the home of Greg and Sandra Bishop on the far side of the lake. We watched it until the doe was nearly up on shore but then lost track of it. We presume that it followed along the shoreline and headed up into the bush nearby. It does seem strange that a member of the deer family would come into town for a visit.

Jackie and Don Banks of Banks Heritage Store on Pine Street in Haliburton were telling me the other day that they had a family re-union on the Labour Day weekend at the Haliburton Forest and Wildlife Reserve. Nineteen members of their family were present with only one missing.

A few leftover notes . . . Grant and Norma Jean Scheffee and Tony and Linda Salvatori all of Haliburton have returned home following a vacation to Nova Scotia and New Brunswick . . . The Haliburton Minor Hockey Registration was held last Friday and Saturday and you have until this coming Sunday, September 16 to register with the Haliburton Men's League Hockey . . . A belated happy birthday to Harold Kennedy. Sorry I missed you last week Harold . . . I stand to be corrected. I mentioned that Erin Nicholls would be playing hockey with the Wexford Raiders this coming winter. I understand that he will be playing hockey in Haliburton.

When the conversation turns to the subject of the population of the village of Haliburton, different numbers seem to come to the surface. One of these days we hope to be able to quote the exact figures on how many people are now residing within the village limited. One thing is for sure and that is that the numbers are a lot higher than the old figure of 1200 that has been kicked around for many years. This number is certainly low when one considers the number of new people who have moved into our community during the past few years. We also understand the local council is considering the matter of extending the town limits and if this does happen the numbers will go up even higher. Some people in the area are quite concerned that the village of Haliburton is losing its identity, and if it keeps growing at its present pace, we may lose our so called friendly home town spirit. In the past we have been like a closely knit and everyone in town knew each other and could tell you where everyone resided. Not so to-day. We are in a new ball game and I think it's all for the better. Those who move here to become permanent residents, in most cases, turn out to be first class citizens with new ideas that keeps the community on the move.

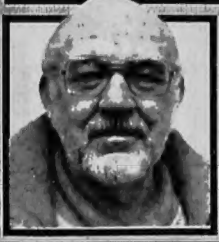

Benjamin Moore is one company that paints a rosier picture of the Canadian economy. Brad Sales of Cordell Carpet and Interiors, in Haliburton brings us some good news about the country's business prospects. While other paint companies are closing their plants in Canada and moving to the United States rather than invest in upgrading domestic facilities, Benjamin Moore & Co. Limited, Cordell's supplier and one of Canada's oldest paint companies, sees a bright future for the Canadian market. The company is currently building a 40,000 square foot paint manufacturing plant in Langley, B.C. to replace their smaller plant in Burnaby, which could no longer keep up with customer demand. The new facility will feature the very latest in manufacturing equipment, safety and environmental protection technology which will meet the anticipated growth in the Alberta and B.C. markets. In addition to the western plant, Benjamin Moore is building a plant in Burlington, Ontario, to supply resins for their industrial coatings and consumer paint manufacturing operations.

We would like to announce that the Minden Bible Church will be holding an evening of fun and friendship at the Hyland Crest Senior Citizens Home in Minden on Wednesday, September 26th at 7:30 p.m. The special evening which will take the place of their monthly meeting will feature a Fashion Show, guest speaker and tea.

POINTS OF VIEW

The authority of The Word

AS OTHERS SEE IT

BOB GIULIANO

THE SCHOLARLY ARTICLES on the authority of scripture, which came in response to the United Church's debate on ordaining homosexuals, leave many of us uncertain and puzzled. For some lay people as well as many clergy the finer points of the debate are confusing and pointless. It is all very important, we know, and the decision to be made by the church on the authority of scripture will have far reaching consequences, but frankly I'm lost.

The debate on scripture seems ten years too late. Shouldn't we have settled this before the "issue"? Now it seems we are not able to discuss the authority of scripture because our conclusions must defend our present stand on "the issue". We have trapped ourselves again in a "no win" situation.

Moreover, although scripture is the centre of the church's life, few have read it. We hear it, in a slumbering sort of way, each Sunday, and the preacher usually dives off of it for the sermon. But few have plumbed its breadth and depth, or have been able to understand its mysteries in these modern times.

Our age has not trusted the Bible. We moderns have bought into the scientific world view. From the creation story onward, we read the Book of Little Books with contemporary doubt and scepticism. How then can we dare turn to the Bible as an authority for anything in this post-scientific technological era?

Let's be honest, the old black leather is covered with scientific and industrial dust! We have been a church of the modern mind. For the U.C.C. the way to Bible authority is a long and troublesome journey. Most of us stopped thinking about it when we went to secondary school. Now it seems the future of the church depends on it!

My earliest memory of the Bible was hearing adults in our living room talking excitedly about a recent, new word from God. This new word was changing people's lives in our town. It seemed like an awesome thing to my young ears. It wasn't until I was an adult that I realized that animated conversation which had set me searching for this new event of God was nothing other than the New Testament! To a child "new" meant what it said. So did "word from God".

As I grew up in the faith and preached week after week, the Bible began to claim more authority in my life. I discovered that when the Bible was studied carefully, using God's servants, preachers, exegetes and commentators, I was no longer controlled by ideologies or illusions that either my own mind or those of others would conjure up. When the Bible spoke to me and our people, the powers of church or modernity were critiqued and judged. It meant that I came to understand that no other power had control of my life or the lives of the people when the light of the word of God was shed on us. I was not master of my own life and mind either. The Biblical testimony brought my thinking into question and revealed its frequent shallowness and self-deception.

When the Bible is authority for life, all people are free from every other authority, whether it be scientific, institutional or personal passions. The Word of God guarantees human liberty.

Desmond Tutu once remarked that the mistake white missionaries made was that they gave blacks the Book! Once blacks could read it for themselves and listen to the Living Word therein, whites held no authority over them. The Book — no not the Book, but the Word of God through the Book — gave them dignity and freedom. Colonialism lives until the Book is given to the natives in their own tongue. Then folks are free. The Bible becomes the authority under which all must be obedient and under which all are free. Is it any wonder that the church and nation persecuted, tortured and executed reformers who translated the Book into the vernacular and gave it to the people to read? When slaves get the Book, the hope of freedom becomes a reality.

Is it any wonder that we First World Christians have been slaves to materialism, consumerism and boredom? We left the Book of Liberty on the coffee table. We loved illusions and ideologies.

When the Bible is authority for faith and life in the church, the minister or the Board are not. When the Bible is the word of truth, the way for life, liberty and community, the Manual and the courts are not — unless they also are servants of the Word.

At the moment we are in danger of being masters of the Word, making the Book a servant of our ideologies. It won't be used in that way.

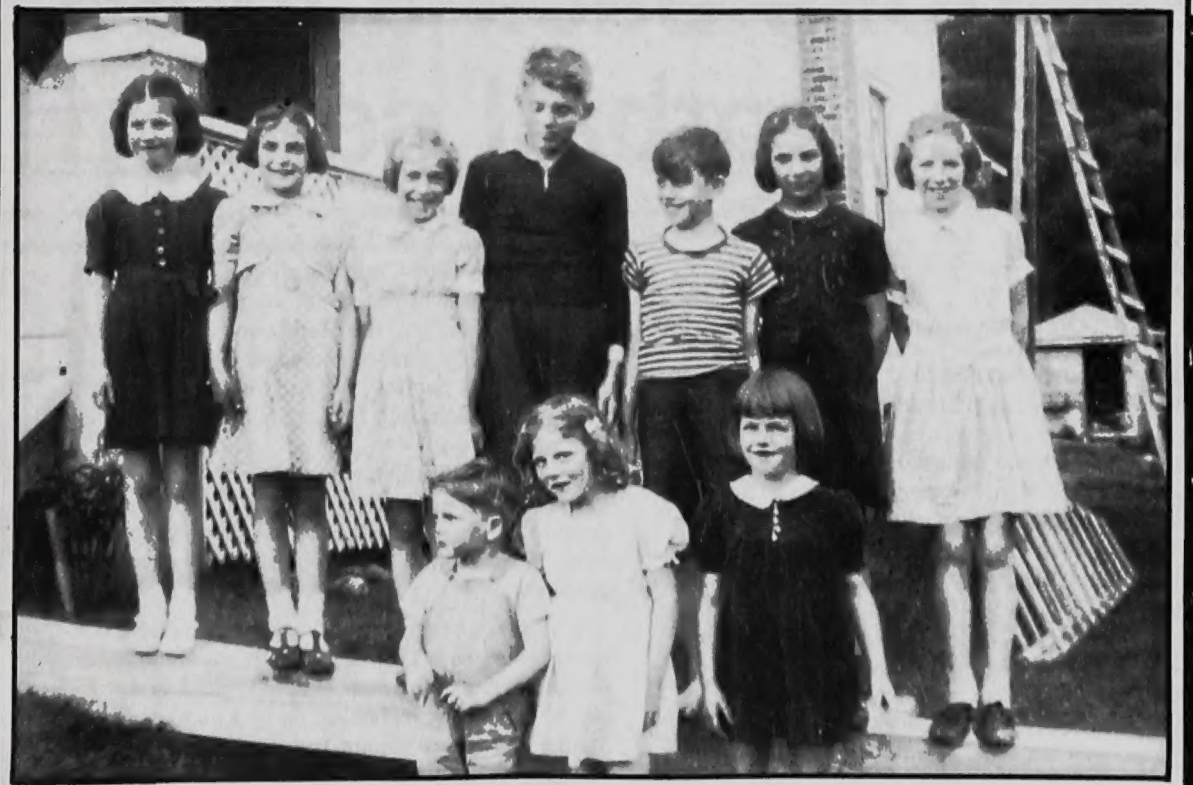

Back in the 60's, when "Zen" was all the rage a Zen Master friend gave me a copy of the Iching, or The Book of Changes. With the Iching were three straight sticks painted with black squares on two of each of the four sides. The sticks had been "blessed" by a Zen Monk. The book and the sticks went together. The aspirant was to lay the book in front of him or her and meditating on a problem or concern, he or she was to hold the three sticks against the forehead. When the sticks grew hot, or shook in the hands, the aspirant cast them several times giving a code as to chapter and verse in The Book of Changes. This passage would provide wisdom for and sometimes answers to the dilemma at hand.

Some folks have used the Bible that way. Facing a problem, we open the book and magically the Bible addresses us and our concern.

I would not encourage such practices, but if the Bible is read at all, we may begin to find the liberty from all of the vain directives given us from teachers who use it to justify their platform and ecclesial politics. To open the Book with a troubled heart, yet ready to listen to the One Who Speaks, albeit somewhat strongly to our scientific minds, may be the beginning of giving the Book the dignity (authority) it deserves.

For the Bible to have authority in our church, we must approach the matter with great deal more humility. The Word of God is the only authority — anywhere — that wills our freedom. To become servants of the One who speaks through the bible, to listen for the voice of the Word of God for us now is an urgent necessity. The Bible is not and cannot be our servant. We must be servants of the Word.

The Bible tells us what and whom God loves in this marvellous and pain-racked world. From beginning to end it is about the journey from bondage to freedom, the most demanding and frightening journey of all, yet God's call is consistently, "all aboard!"

A loud and clear message

NORTHERN LIGHTS

VIRGINIA MUENZEL

WASN'T THAT AN INTERESTING election? Why, the mere fact that no one's more surprised than the N.D.P.s themselves that they got in is rather comical. And, from the tone of the news interviews, the Ontario government, at least, got the message loud and clear. If the federal people don't pay attention to what happened here, they may get a little of the same.

You see, we've all been kind of apathetic and complacent about our democratic system. When we do that for too long, we end up paying the price as corruption seeps into government. Luckily for us, it's never gotten so out of hand that we've ended up with a dictatorship. But we shouldn't kid ourselves into thinking it could never happen in North America.

Perhaps we need to pay closer attention to how dearly the citizens of the several European countries who are just regaining freedom regard their right to vote. It's time for all of us to let those in 'high places' know that as long as we're paying the tab, we do have some say in where it goes and what rules we're willing to follow.

It's time for all North American governments to begin listening to the people they were put there to serve. All the people. And all the people also includes our first, aboriginal peoples.

The Canadian natives, at least, are trying to get it across to officials, with seemingly deaf ears, that they have had enough lip service. While I can't personally condone everything these people are doing to make their point, I can surely understand how a couple of hundred years of despair and frustration could drive them to some degree of rash behavior.

It is certainly becoming increasingly difficult to understand how the Canadian and American governments, who so soundly condemn other nations' mistreatment of, and discrimination towards certain races or cultures, can then proceed to do the same to minorities of their own.

It isn't going to be too long before Mr. Mulroney, along with all other party leaders, suddenly discover just how many aboriginals they have offended. Also, that there are an increasingly active number of non-natives willing to give them moral support. It doesn't take too much common sense to figure out that if you treat humans like animals and back them into a corner, they will ultimately react violently, because they are fighting for their lives.

If Canada and America want to be regarded with esteem by other nations, they are both going to have to begin practicing what it is that they preach so well.

Not too upset by the upset

THIS WEEK, I was going to write about clowns. However, after due consideration, I've decided to make a few comments on covering the recent election. (Yes, there may be some parallels).

Two weeks ago, I thought I'd finished with the political scene for several months to come, (an explanation for which will be forthcoming in a few weeks).

At that time, I'd ask our readers to vote in such a way as to send a message to the Peterson government at Queen's Park. Boy, did they ever — not just here but right across the province!

I was pleased to see our PR-designed premier, who has spent the last few years in his contact lenses with his jacket tossed casually over his shoulder, actually showing some sincerity in his resignation speech. I had been thinking of Transport Minister Bill Wrye and his turncoat policies on superlong trucks and trailer pups just the day before the election when I was parked in The Echo lot.

One of these monsters—a tanker and pup—came down Maple Street and turned onto York to make a delivery to the Texaco tankfarm — and forced four or five cars to all back up to make room for his turn.

Maybe all the groups who have been fighting these monsters will get a fairer hearing from the NDP. I thought it was fitting that Mr. Wrye lost. And I think I was more upset that Elinor Caplan held her seat than that the 'socialist hordes' are taking over...

Actually, like the old fire horses who came arunning when they heard the bells, I was pleased to get back in harness and back on the air to provide some radio coverage of the event for a couple of stations.

The circumstance gave me a chance to ponder the changes in the years since I first got involved in this sort of thing in 1954 or '55. Elections have been a big deal, a kind of proof of their newsgathering abilities, for a station.

Everyone on staff was pressed into duty in some role, be it a municipal, provincial or federal contest. It was sort of like New Year's Eve in the music business — if you could still play, you could get work. It still goes on in the band business, and it still goes on in radio when there's an election. Back in the 50s, when TV was new and all material was on film and had to be developed and edited, newspapers like the London Free Press would still have people posting totals on outside bulletin boards, using headline-style type, and crowds would gather to see the results unfold.

I can still remember my first election, when the newspaper people responsible for the displays gave up on their own information and started to crib the faster-flowing data from the radio speakers overhead. The newspaper just didn't bother with displays outside for the next election...

I don't think there are now many radio stations who don't accept the fact that technology — and the fact that the politicians go to TV studios to get their faces on the tube — has made elections a television event.

Most radio stations today provide short summaries every half-hour or so, and go back to playing music, knowing that most listeners have declared their disinterest in the process by listening to their station rather than watching TV.

While the networks have the computers and the resources to provide national coverage, I was fascinated to find out how quickly the local cable channel provided local results. I had set up a command post with a secure phone for the evening at a nearby motel.

By the time I had taken the two-and-a-half-minute

Seymour takes a holiday

DOWN OUR ROAD

SHARON LYNCH

"HURRY UP, MONA. We still have to go to the dump yet." Sam was getting more and more agitated. His wife seemed to be taking forever to get ready to leave. The traffic going back to the city would be bad enough, but the later it got, the worse it would be. Now she was fussing over Seymour, trying to calm him down before carrying him to the car. Seymour was her cat. Really, it was Mona's cat, thought Sam, since the only human Seymour had any time for was Mona. Even after 17 years, about all the cat would take from Sam was the odd pat down its back if the mood hit him.

Mona, on the other hand, could pick him up and tinkle under his chin and he'd let her. But going for a car ride was something else again. Like most cats, Seymour hated the car. How much was fear and how much was plain dislike was hard to tell. Whatever it was, Sam and Mona both knew it was always a struggle getting the cat into the station wagon for that trip home from the cottage. Usually Mona just stuffed Seymour under a wicker chair until it was time to go then grabbed him and carried him out to the car, holding all four feet securely so he couldn't wrestle loose.

"Oh Sam, it stinks in here. No wonder Seymour is complaining," said Mona as she carefully opened the car door just enough to squeeze in without letting Seymour out.

"Seymour would complain even if the car was full of roses. Or better yet, dead fish. You know he just hates going anywhere in this vehicle. Besides, we can't lave all this garbage at the cottage. Can you imagine the smell by next weekend? So bear with it, my dear. Next stop—the dump." With that Sam wheeled out of the driveway, glad to finally be on the road. Except for the one last stop, it was full steam ahead for home.

He was so intent on getting the garbage out of the back of the station wagon as fast as he could that Sam forgot all about Seymour. Mona was intent on taking one more look for bears and so she never even gave a thought to Seymour in the back seat either. Then, as though they had rehearsed it, they both shouted "Seymour" in unison while at that very moment the cat's calico form streaked out the back door, over the embankment and disappeared from sight.

Mona jumped out of the car and started calling the cat even before both feet hit the ground. Sam, fearful of Mona's wrath, for Seymour had run right past him, joined Mona in calling the wayward animal. The two of them peered over the side of the dump, sorting through garbage bags, cardboard boxes and all sorts of disgusting looking things for a glimpse of their cat. Nothing. He had vanished into thin air and under no circumstances was he reappearing.

After ten minutes of pleading, during which Sam and Mona promised Seymour everything from a new collar to switching back to his old cat food but to no avail, Mona turned to Sam and said, "What will we do? We can't leave him."

Sam then replied, "We have no choice. He's not going to come. He hates the car. So by next weekend he'll be good and hungry and we'll get him then." And with that he hit the gas peddle and took off before Mona could protest.

Next weekend they returned to the dump. Seymour was there but he wasn't at all interested in coming with them. He'd let Mona get within ten feet of him then skip out of reach. Over and over he did this while Sam swore silently under his breath. Seeing his wife's distress upset him. "Sam, Seymour's 17 years old—he can't last long with these cold nights," she cried. So he told her he'd take some holidays and stay the week. Surely in a week he'd be able

School's back and so is the football season

by LEN PIZZIE

Serenity may pervade the Highlands in these early days of autumn, but the mood is anything but calm on the playing field at Haliburton Highlands Secondary School. The air is reverberating with the crunch of shoulder pads and the thud one-on-one tackling drills as the HHSS Redmen gear up for the football season that begins this Friday with exhibition games against Bancroft.

The senior squad are shaping up to be strong contenders for the playoffs this year, with 13 veteran players on the early season roster of 30. Sean Perrin will be back at the quarterback spot to lead the offense. He'll be backed up by Jay Hughes, a veteran with the junior squad who is moving up to senior this year, and will see a good deal of action on the Redmen attack.

Others veterans who are expected to be team leaders this year are Darren Danylyshen, Craig Bain and John Vuksic, along with Chris Allaire, Jamie Dollo, Greg Hamilton, Derik Moore, Jason Morissette, Mike Muli, Ryan Timbers, Brian Waller (back with the team after suffering a broken leg playing soccer last season), and George Simmons.

The seniors will also benefit from the experience of 11 players who are moving up from the junior to senior this season: Shawn Deterling, Walt Griffin, Jay Hughes, Mike Hughes, Mark Klages, Scott Morrison, Bill Smith, Kevin Tousaw, Jamie Walker, Bart Whiting and Craig Harding.

Six rookies will round out the senior roster this year: Mike Hughes, Jim Hyde, Andy Lewis, Jason Reynolds, Guy Turner and Scott O'Neil.

"If we stay healthy, we're going to be tough to beat" says coach Gary Brohman of this year's senior Redmen.

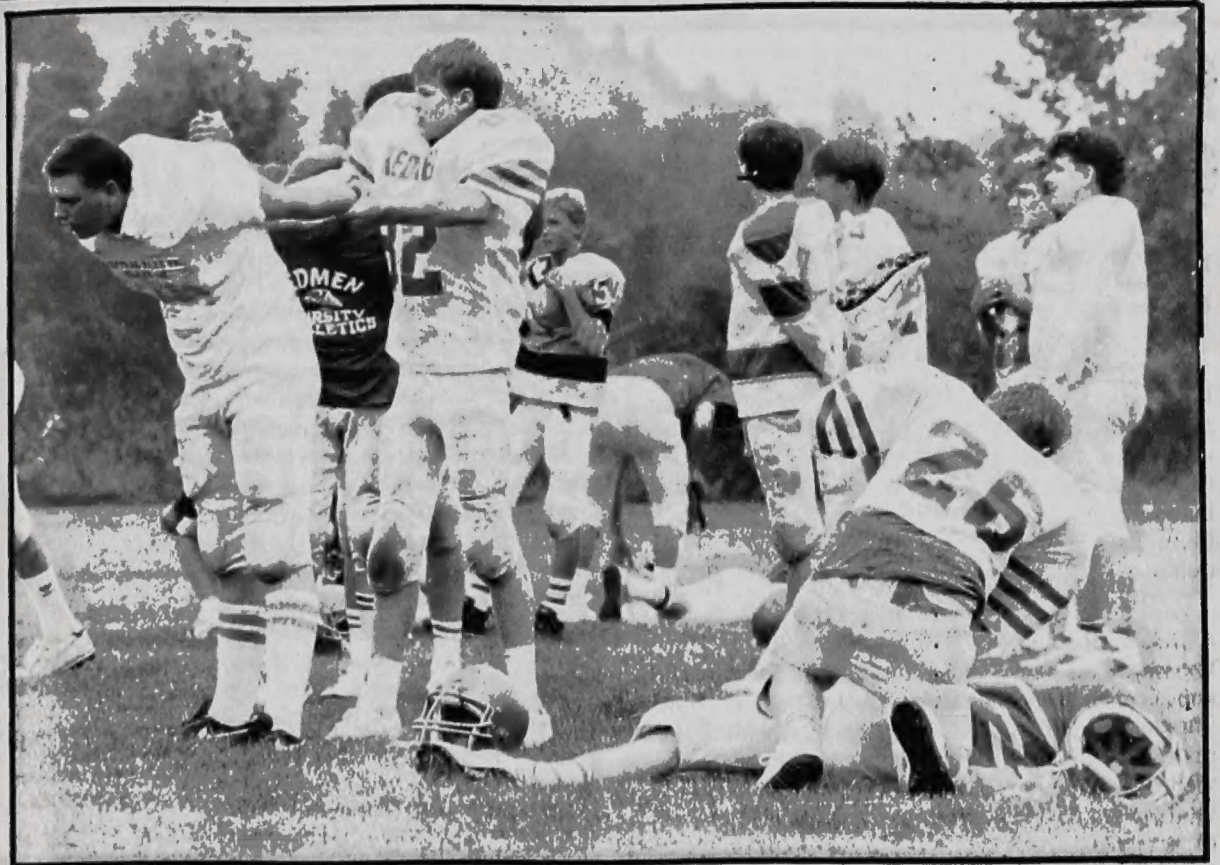

Friday's exhibition game against Bancroft will give the team a chance to fine tune its offense and defense in preparation for the season opening home game next Friday, September 21, against I. E. Weldon.

The junior squad is also shaping up to be a contender this year. The 40 player roster includes six players in their third year with the squad, and seven second year players, backed up by a number of promising prospects among the 27 rookies who are working out with the team.

One factor in the Junior Redmen's favour this year is the size of the offensive line. The starting roster will average between 170 and 180 pounds, probably bigger than most of the defensive opponents they'll face.

Pacing the offense from the quarterback spot will be Corby Kent, and he's likely to be handing the ball regularly to Chris Greenfield, a fleet running back who set a number of records on the track last spring, and is now in his third season with the junior STRETCHING INTO SHAPE: Junior Redmen football players go through a series of warmup exercises before beginning a heavy practice. The team will see action in a game against Bancroft at HHSS this Friday.

IN CONTROL: The girls field hockey team at HHSS is going through their paces these days in anticipation of competition against Peterborough area schools, and tournament play in Toronto.

STOMACH PAIN: Leg raises toughen up the abdominal muscles of HHSS Junior Redmen as they prepare for another season on the gridiron. There are 27 rookies on the 40-player roster this year.

College teams to benefit as 6 Haliburton players join in

by LEN PIZZEY
Publisher

Haliburton may be only a tiny dot on a road map, but when it comes to athletics, the community's name is looming larger, and not just because of accomplishments Bernie Nicholls. Six young men, all of them graduates of Haliburton high school's football programme, are either making their mark on the university football scene or have prospects of doing so.

At the University of Waterloo, Alan Rydman is a first string offensive guard in his second year with the Warriors. Another HHSS veteran, Paul Robinson, is also wearing a Waterloo uniform and playing on specialty teams. Meanwhile Tally Williams, an outstanding track and field athlete at HHSS, is vying for a wide receiver spot on the Waterloo team in his rookie year. He is considered a good prospect to make the squad, and could win a starting position in the 1991-92 season.

At Wilfrid Laurier University, Dwayne Cooper is in his second year on the varsity football team and is competing for a place in the starting lineup at offensive guard.

And at Queens University in Kingston, second year student Jamie Bruce is making his first try for a place on the Golden Gales roster, while rookie Mark Robinson, the biggest player ever to wear a Redmen uniform, is a solid prospect for a starting position as a lineman. Robinson, who is also an outstanding student, having graduated in June with the highest average ever achieved at HHSS, has perhaps the best chance of any of the present group of Haliburton university players of moving on to the CFL after his university career.

HHSS Redmen coach Gary Brohman is proud of the fact that six of his former players are continuing to play the game at the university level. While no statistics are readily available, he believes few other high schools in the province will have more players wearing HHSS team uniforms this season.

The six former HHSS players are the first in more than five years to play for a university squad. The only other HHSS alumni to play university football in recent years is Tim Davies, who is now a teacher at HHSS.

Squash Club opens with tournament

The Highlands Squash Club is ready for another busy season of squash and is hoping to attract many new members this season. The club's opening tournament has been set for September 28 and 29. Club president Bruce Griffith advises that this tournament is sure to "work out any kinks" (and perhaps work off a few pounds?) that may have been acquired over the summer layoff.

The squash club is a non-profit, community-based club run entirely by volunteers. Houseleagues, ladders, tournaments and some rather strange social events are scheduled on a regular basis for members. Non-members may use the club by paying a nominal court fee and picking up a key at Shamrock Shell service station. The club also offers a promotional package designed to give newcomers a taste of squash at a fraction of the membership fee. The promotional package includes three months of free squash, a racquet, ball, squash bag and free lessons. The fee paid toward a promotional package will be deducted from the annual membership fee should you decide to join the club as a full member. At present the yearly fee for a single membership is $210. and $315. for a family membership.

Junior memberships and programs are also available for anyone 18 or under. Persons interested in finding out more about the Highlands Squash Club should contact one of the following individuals: Bruce Griffith, Jack Gubser, Dan Wing, Cathy Outram, Lori Roberts, or Jody Ainsworth.

SERIOUS SOCCER: Veteran and prospective Haliburton Senior Redmen soccer players ignored the rain last week to hone their skills and fitness with a series of drills. The team sees action Wednesday at the HHSS field.

Runners remember Terry

A decade has passed since Canadian hero Terry Fox lost his battle with cancer, but his dream of raising funds for cancer research still burns as brightly as his name in our national consciousness. This Sunday, September 16, thousands of people across the country will celebrate his memory in the 10th annual Terry Fox run, and a number of area residents will be among them.

Haliburton has hosted a Terry Fox run from the event's inception, and this year the run will once again be completed by local recreational runners, as well as by cyclists and walkers.

The run officially begins at 2 p.m. at the town dock in Haliburton and will cover approximately 10 kilometres, finishing back at the dock. Pledge sheets for the event are available at various locations throughout the area, and people are urged to participate by sponsoring a runner or by lacing on the jogging shoes and getting some exercise for a good cause on a crisp fall day.

squad. Like the seniors, this year's HHSS Juniors should have little trouble pinning down a spot in the Kawartha West final on October 31, but their prospects will be a little clearer after this Friday's exhibition game. The action begins at 2 p.m. with the senior game, with the juniors to follow at about 4 p.m.

Redmen Football Schedule—1990

Friday, Sept. 14 — Bancroft at Haliburton (Exhibition)
Friday, Sept. 21 — I.E. Weldon at Haliburton

Thursday, Nov. 1 — Kawartha West championship — Sr.
Thursday, Nov. 8 — Kawartha Championship — Jr. & Sr.
Wednesday, Nov. 14 — COSSA championship

Note: All games begin at 2 p.m. Under league rules, no games will be allowed to end in a tie. If the team finishing in first place at the end of the season has been defeated by any other team during league play, a playoff game will be held, with first place team playing the second place squad at first's home field.

Bass'n'Tario attracts the best to Head Lake

by LEN PIZZERY
Publisher

Thirty three of the most dedicated and skilled bass anglers in Ontario were in Haliburton over the weekend to compete in the two day final of the four event Bass'n'Tario tournament series. It was the first time the competition circuit has ever come to the Highlands, and the event proved to be a success, despite the fact that early morning fog delayed the start of competition on both mornings, and cool weather made it difficult for some anglers to entice the bass to bite.

The rules of the live release tournament limit anglers to five fish per day. Caught fish are kept in an aerated livewell in the high powered bass boats most of the competitors used, and must be alive when they are brought to the weigh-in station. If a fish dies a weight penalty is assessed against the angler. Handling of the fish is supervised by a biologist, and after the weigh-in, the fish are returned to the water body where they were landed. All fish caught in last weekend's tournament were released alive.

Rocky Crawford's two-day total of 27.24 pounds was a comfortable six pounds ahead of second-place finisher, Roger Waddell.

To no one's surprise, the top angler proved to be Rocky Crawford, a former Minden resident who now makes his living on the bass fishing circuit and through related promotional activities. Crawford's two day total of 27.24 pounds was a comfortable six pounds ahead of the total catch of second place angler Roger Waddell. Third place went to Lucien Chouinard, with a total catch of 14.06 pounds.

The biggest fish of the tournament was landed by Texan E.B. Smiley. The 7.23 pound bass he hooked in Lake Kashagawigamog is thought to be the biggest bass landed anywhere on the tournament circuit this year. Unfortunately for Smiley, the big one was the only fish that bit his lure on Sunday, and he ended the tournament with a two day total of 10.38 pounds, good enough for seventh place.

Crawford's first place finish earned him a new bass boat and motor, valued at more than $15,000. Other top finishers took home cash prizes and equipment for their efforts.

While last weekend's tournament was a first for Haliburton, organizers promise it won't be the last. The Bass'n'Tario series hopes to be back in Haliburton in late August next year, a date that should enhance spectator interest and keep anglers busier landing their limit of somewhat hungrier fish.

CHECKING THEIR GEAR: Tournament bass fishermen fine tuned their reels while waiting for the fog to clear from Head Lake Sunday morning, on day two of two-day final held for the first time in Haliburton.

GHOSTING ALONG: Rocky Crawford leads a fleet of bass boats through the Grass Lake Narrows on Sunday morning. Crawford, a local professional fisherman, took first place in event.

THIS WEEK

Camp's commitment to area now to be returned

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

FAMILY TRADITION always has everyone gathered around the table for the evening's meal. Well, Camp Wanakita considers itself one big happy family and wants to have all its siblings sit down and break bread together — all 450 of them.

"Right now we have two dining halls so our family is split up in the summer. We want the family together again," says Steve Heming, Wanakita's manager/camp director. "The heart of the camp is a dining hall."

To make meal times what they ought to be, Wanakita plans to build a centralized, and winterized, dining hall which will seat approximately 325 campers and 125 counsellors at one time. To the kitchen staff, cooking for such a large group of people "is the easy part — it's a science." But they do need help in another way.

Starting this week, Camp Wanakita is embarking on a local fundraising campaign to raise $40,000. This is just one small part of its overall target of $1-million, of which, $755,000 has been raised outside the county.

The local campaign is not a public one; that is, there won't be any bake sales or raffle tickets. Instead, campaign co-chairmen Gary Brohman and Andy Salvatori and "a huge volunteer committee" will be approaching local service clubs and businesses which benefit from Wanakita's presence on Koshlong Lake. (The honorary campaign chairman is Ken Wilson, who's respected for all he's done to help the community over the years.)

Economic benefits have been numerous. The camp, which welcomed about 900 campers this year, is a collection of 70 buildings on 1,000 acres, providing a nice sum for Glamorgan's assessment rolls. The camp employs 14 people year-round and when the additions are built, local contractors will be hired. Everything the camp can buy in the county, it buys in the county. That's a lot of loaves of bread.

"We believe we have a big economic impact on Haliburton," Heming says.

Not to mention the hundreds of local children who take advantage of Wanakita's programs. This summer's day camp had 320 participants overall. During the March Break, nothing can beat the outdoor adventure Wanakita offers. School trips are also planned with Wanakita in mind. "Obviously the demand is there."

Wanakita is better able to meet that demand with last year's purchase of Hockey Haven. Already intending to expand, when the camp next door came up for sale, the opportunity couldn't be missed. "That moved our plans five years ahead," Heming says.

However, right now the two camps are just that: two camps, together yet separate. It's to bring them together by building the common dining hall and improving aging facilities, such as washrooms, that the Capital Campaign began.

There's been a camp on the site since 1937. Before that, it was another camp of sorts. The Donald Chemical Company owned and logged it to stoke its hungry fires. The Hamilton-Burlington YMCA bought the land in the 1940s and Wanakita was born.

The camp is just one way the Hamilton-Burlington YMCA carries on the "Y's" traditions of providing for its community. The Young Mens Christian Organization began in England in the mid-1800s to get youths off the streets.

"It's leadership based — getting people together to make them socially and mentally active," Heming says. The Y's motto is "Mind, body, and spirit." By keeping mind and body busy, the good spirit will follow. "The Y really puts its emphasis on the development of the person."

One-hundred-and-thirty-three years ago, the Y arrived in Hamilton. Each Y adapts its services to suit the people's needs. Some offer recreational and sports facilities, others provide daycare and job counselling. Not every Y will provide the same services.

The children of Hamilton-Burlington needed a place to enjoy and discover the outdoors and Wanakita seemed the perfect place. Camp may just seem like a lot of fun, but much more than that is achieved.

"What we're developing is good, community-minded people who will be committed to their family and community and take a leadership role," Heming says. Many go on to professional and management careers. "They will all relate to camp as being the place where they opened up and learned a lot about themselves and other people."

"We want to give as many people as possible that opportunity to have a valuable experience in their lifetime. We want the experience that lasts a lifetime. Their memories will stay with them and serve a purpose."

As times change, so too does camp. Wanakita now includes many environmental programs, including its immensely popular Sunship Earth. Winter programs have also been expanded and are still growing.

Obviously the people of Hamilton-Burlington value Wanakita. When the $1-million campaign began this year, people responded with generosity. Corporations, businesses, clubs and camp families have donated a total of $755,000.

The province also recognizes the camp's role. Although its application was originally turned down last January, just before the election was called the Y got a phone call asking if the camp could still match the province's $335,000 donation. The answer was yes. (Total cost of the capital projects is $1.3-million, so the government funds are not part of the $1-million campaign.)

Now the camp wants to raise $40,000 in Haliburton, in recognition of the importance of Wanakita to local families. Letters have been sent out to clubs, businesses and camp families. But anyone can make a donation and can do so by sending a cheque to Camp Wanakita, R.R. 2 Haliburton, K0M 1S0. It's a lot easier than cooking for 450 hungry campers.

'We want to give as many people as possible the opportunity to have a valuable experience that lasts a lifetime,' say Andy Salvatori, co-chairman of Wanakita's Capital Campaign, and Steve Heming, the popular camp's director.

Seymour is the elusive cat

DOWN OUR ROAD

to catch the cat and restore calm to their household. No such luck. Sam tried bribes of tinned salmon, cat nip, anything he could think of. Seymour wanted nothing to do with any of it. He phoned Mona on Thursday morning and told her the bad news. Three hours later she was there and this time she had a live trap from the vet. "This will work Sam, I guarantee it," she told him confidently.

Well it worked. But not on Seymour. Instead she caught a big fat raccoon and that wasn't all she caught either.

Just as she was inspecting her unwanted prize, she felt a tap on her shoulder and there stood an OPP officer about ten feet tall. He asked her if that was her car on the side of the road to which she replied in the affirmative. He then told her that it was a dangerous place to leave it, on a curve in the road and all. She tried to explain to him that this was an emergency, she was trying to catch her cat. But he seemed to feel that public safety took precedence over Seymour's safety and asked her to move it immediately and never park it there again.

Defeated, discouraged and depressed, she returned to the cottage and told Sam what had happened. Suddenly her tears stopped and she jumped up with a start. "Sam, what time is it? Never mind, I can still make it." With that she flew out the door. As she ran to the car, between breaths she yelled back to him that she had to get back to Toronto in time to vote. She had until eight o'clock. She left Seymour's fate resting in his hands alone. And with a swirl of flying gravel she was off.

Sam stood there in her dust, mouth gaping. "My God," he thought. "It's people like Mona that keep this country together." Then he went inside to try to figure out how to catch Seymour once and for all.

Counsellor provided excellent care

To the Editor:

I have been informed of what I feel is very disturbing news, and not only do I ask why this is happening, but also can anything be done to prevent it.

The family counselling services provided by Charles Jardin at Haliburton Hospital is to be taken away. I understand this is in no way the hospital's trip back to my room and placed the long distance calls, the local cable channel had usually provided updated figures (for the use of which I thank them).

One of the most disturbing things I saw (aside from the outcome), was that two of the three networks had prepared titles for riding coverage that referred to our riding as "Victoria," with no reference to Haliburton.

I guess this is understandable, when stations in Barrie, Peterborough and the whole Global network provide weathercasts that virtually ignore our existence. Perhaps when our Chamber people are done their navel-gazing, they'll have time to work on this long-standing problem.

And just perhaps, Mr. Drainville, with his booming voice, will actually be able to get us some attention in the Legislature.

decision; in fact they want it to continue. But the Ministry of Community and Social Services is not thinking of the people who are in need of this service. Mr. Jardin does an excellent job and I am only one of many who have had this excellent caring and counselling service when it was so desperately needed due to traumatic family upsets. This service provides assistance for those suffering from all kinds of problems which, for example, are financial, family break-ups, death, assault, abuse, suicide, managing children with emotional or physical handicaps, and the list goes on. Unfortunately problems happen and people have to learn to cope if and when unforeseen circumstances arise to cause such problems.

My personal view of this service is had it not been available to me, I would not have managed to "survive" the consequences which I had to endure.

Why should those who need this help have to go without or have to drive to Lindsay? Going without the service causes further anxiety and/or depression and driving to Lindsay is a major inconvenience.

If anyone else feels the same way and is in agreement that this service should not be discontinued I would appreciate your name, which I will present as a petition to let the Ministry of Community and Social Services to let them know we need this service in Haliburton.

MORE LETTERS
FROM ECHO
READERS...

To the Editor:

Thank you for your expert coverage of the Horseshoe Lake Property Owner's Association zoning meeting of September 1. However, there is one point I believe should be clarified in fairness to Doug Prozak.

You stated that "Based on those figures, Stevens criticized Prozak for saying that without the rezoning, Prozak would be in financial difficulties."

I pointed out in my report that he had been quoted in the press as needing the commercial zoning to protect his investment. He was also quoted, as saying that he could lose hundreds of thousands of dollars if he does not get the commercial zoning. I then pointed out that his purchase price as shown in the Registry Office records did not seem to be of this magnitude. I mentioned that he had later built the clubhouse.

My notes indicate that I did not comment on his financial circumstances; I really do not know anything about them. I thought I should clarify this point in case of any possible misinterpretation.

job security on the line, to try and have people understand that gender does NOT determine a person's ability.

To the women who are running the march, I want to ask you . . . Do you fight prejudice with prejudice, do you fight bigotry with bigotry, do you fight abuse with abuse?

To me the answer is NO! You fight these things with education. You fight them by letting the guilty parties know that it will not be tolerated and it will not be kept quiet. That legal action will be taken and it will be swift and sure.

Think about what message you are giving, and allow the men who support you and those who share your situation the opportunity to join you on your march.

Summer reporters praised

To the Editor:

Thank you, thank you, thank you to Sally Ritchie, Michael McHugh and Lorraine Anthony. You enriched my life the past summer by writing enlightening and entertaining stories.

And congratulations to The Echo for having the wisdom to hire them with the expectation that these reporters would maintain the high standard of professional journalism we have come to expect from The Echo.

I am a seasonal resident but a year-round subscriber to The Echo as I truly believe it is the best way to keep in touch with one of my major financial investments.

Joan Beall,
Haliburton

What about news?

To the Editor:

I know we have a great local paper in The Echo and I enjoy reading it and look forward to its delivery every week, but, what about local news? For instance, the young man who was electrocuted at Paradise Lake a few weeks ago?

More recently, the explosion at PineStone in which a young woman was seriously injured?

I think a mention in the paper would be nice as we could send condolences or get well cards which everyone likes to receive. Usually, you find out by word of mouth and it's too late to do anything.

How about it Ms. Editor!

Lori Dean,

Scout thanks

To the Editor:

Scouting has had a love affair with the people of Haliburton for over 45 years. The town is known by the Scouting fraternity world-wide by those who have shopped in it, roamed and eaten there — before, after and during their camping experiences at the Haliburton Scout Reserve.

Greater Toronto Region Scouts, who own the 5000 acre reserve, are proud to be part of the Haliburton community fabric. This year alone, 4,000 young people are their leaders, for eight weeks during July and August, became part of the hustle and bustle which mark the summer story of the town. In total, about $500,000 was infused into the local economy by the camp operation.

HSR, as the Scout camp is known to the thousands of youth who have experienced its unique opportunities, is all the things dreams are made of throughout the fall and winter in a cold asphalt city.

For this unique opportunity, we want to thank the town, its people, and our neighbours!

Scouting is synonymous with environmental caring. From the time of our founder's first Scouting message, we have lived by the code "Leave the site as you found it". HSR gives us the opportunity to show youth how to do that. From the care of the forest, careful and select cutting of wood, and recycling of foodstuff containers, we want to make sure that HSR is here for another 50 years the way it is today — a true reserve in all sense of the meaning.

If you would like to see what we mean, we invite you, our neighbours and friends from the Haliburton area to visit us to see the camp which is known world-wide as one of the finest Scout camps available. Our full-time ranger, Colin Sears, is in camp from early May through Thanksgiving, and his staff of some 50 professionals from mid-June to the end of August. They will be glad to show you some of the summer programs in action.

We enjoy our special relationship with the people of Haliburton, and thank you for making us feel so welcome year after year!

Running for a cure

To the Editor:

This year is a special year for The Terry Fox Run as it is the 10th Annual Run which commemorating Terry's Marathon of Hope. Terry's dream to raise enough money to find a cure for cancer will continue on Sunday September 16th, as Canadians everywhere participate in the Run.

We are asking for your support. With the proceeds from the Terry Fox Run special research programs are funded, bright new researchers are recruited and dedicated scientists are able to devote themselves to the search for a cure for cancer.

The organizer for Haliburton is Mike Irwin. The run will begin at the Head Lake Government Dock, from 2-4.

Your support is an important contribution to the success of the Terry Fox and is very much appreciated. Thank you for sharing the dream.

polls as long as a registered voter vouches for them. However, that person must be from the same poll district and many people in the Birrells' district had been left off the list. One Maple Lake voter reportedly spent an hour and a half on the phone looking for someone to vouch for them.)

"No one asked the Soyer's Lake association for a map," says Mrs. Birrell, holding up a well-detailed map which shows where everyone lives.

"Perhaps the whole system should be changed but you'd have to start at Queen's Park," says Johnston. One suggestion is having voters register themselves on a given day, rather than have enumerators come to them.

Speed limit reductions in a letter forwarded to council. They want the 60 km/h speed limit at the village boundary to be extended "to a minimum of the Hilltop Market, if not even as far as Hilltop Market."

Council will ask the 80 km/h speed limit be reduced to 70 km/h from Rosenberg's hill (above Peninsula Drive) to the village boundaries near Haliburton Marine.

As well, Councillor Bob Nichol asked that council reduce the speed limit on Highway 118, south of Elstone Motors to village boundaries, to 60 km/h.

SECTION 2

WHAT'S OUR PROBLEM?

After a slow summer season, the people who depend on tourism try to come up with some answers... and some solutions so better times are ahead.

A synopsis of summer was heard, not always liked

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

IS IT A PROBLEM of money, or lack thereof? Or can the decline in tourism be traced to the Haliburton Highlands' image, or lack thereof?

The consensus reached on a porch overlooking the quiet waters of Maple Lake — a beautiful image in itself — was that the answer is a little bit of both.

After a summer which for many was not as hectic as others, the Haliburton Highlands Chamber of Commerce hosted a barbecue at Maple Sands Resort last Wednesday night. Although it was primarily an opportunity to relax and renew friendships, Chamber members also took time out to discuss what they could do to ensure prosperous times ahead.

Chamber director and owner of Maple Sands, Curtis Eastmure, began by referring to a recent meeting with Tourism and Recreation Minister Ken Black (who lost his seat to the NDP in the following day's election.) After accepting the Chamber's proposal for a Mr. Black wisely didn't make any commitments.

However, meeting with the minister did have its benefits. "A lot of us were feeling frustrated about not having much influence on the provincial agenda," Mr. Eastmure said. Too much was left to the local Chamber office and it's important to take needs and concerns to a higher level. Our new MPP, Dennis Drainville, will also be presented with the Chamber's report.

Mr. Eastmure's report on his business proved there's a need for action. "My summer was eh, so so," he said, tilting his hand from side to side. In the 10-week season, his occupancy rate averaged 72 per cent. "It was our worst year ever. It will hurt, no doubt about it."

Despite some successful artists' workshops, Mr. Eastmure said autumn will also be slower than usual. "I hope we get some snow."

Summer was late in starting for Bob and Ellen Fyfe, owners of The Sport Stop. However, this worked out well for them. After weeks of convincing themselves they should be fiscally cautious, tourists were convinced by the warm weather to spend their money.

"They get up here and say the hell with it," Mr. Fyfe said earlier. "We had a record July and August. They bought those fun items and went out and had fun."

Even though the summer surge meant an overall increase of three per cent, this is well below the Cost of Living increase. It's hoped winter will help them pick up. "Ninety per cent of Haliburton is praying for snow," he added, echoing Mr. Eastmure's words.

Beechview Cottages was also very busy during the peak summer season, said owner John Smith. "Our summer was right on the previous year" and many guests have booked for next year, without asking what the price will be. However, "looking at fall there's basically nothing."

Among their guests, Mr. Smith noticed a change in clientele. "There's a much higher percentage of professionals, who are coming down to where they can afford it."

"We cater to families," his wife June added. When children are young, parents need places where children can roam and there are no schedules to follow. "They keep coming back until the kids are about 10 and then they want to go on to other places."

Anne Larcade, owner of Intra Town and Country Travel, says most people who are booking vacations outside the county are willing to pay for the little extras. With the baby boom, people want vacations which cater to children as well.

"July held up really well but August died," said Lon Duncombe, owner of Halco Electronics. Labour Day weekend was just like any other because Duncombe believes fewer people were on the streets. Overall, "business was up in movies and tapes, but anything over $100 just wasn't there."

"It's not that Canadians don't have the money, it's keeping the dollars in Canada," added Mrs. Larcade. Because of taxation, Canadian prices are already high, and the proposed Goods and Services Tax won't help matters. "We're just pricing ourselves out of the market."

Mr. Duncombe later said that during the March

The barbecue gave Chamber members a chance to 'dress like tacky tourists'. Shawn Hagerman and Lon Duncombe took this to heart and arrived in their best worst clothes.

Break he can take his family to Myrtle Beach for $1,200. "I can't stay in Haliburton for that."

Mr. Eastmure had a "discouraging discussion" this summer when he was told "Haliburton will have to realize it's not in the same boat as Muskoka and the Kawarthas." Maybe we are just a cottager area rather than a tourist area. Haliburton has to take a hard look at itself and decide what it wants to do.

When he was visiting in Dorset, Jim McLean of County Commercial Printers said he ran into Bob Stinson, president of the Chamber. Mr. Stinson's friend was from California. "His criticism was not about what we're doing in terms of marketing ourselves. He was complaining about the $70 to fill his van with gas."

As well, in the States, "the highest they'll go is $8 an hour for a clerk. Robinson's Store (in Dorset) starts them at $7.50. That's why our costs are up."

His suggestion was to change the name of the Canadian dollar. "Americans look at a Canadian buck as an American buck and I don't know how you beat that."

Another Chamber member remarked that many Americans stayed away because they thought the GST was already in effect.

"I don't think our province has done enough of a job marketing to ourselves," said Mr. Eastmure, whose American trade doubled this summer. However, it previously stood at four guests. Perhaps the province should consider dropping the five per cent accommodation tax.

"Individually we're all to blame," said Mr. Fyfe. "When anyone plans a trip, we all say 'What's the cheapest trip I can get.' Where are you all going for your vacation? You're going out of Ontario, out of Canada."

"It's either that or no vacation at all," quipped Mr. Duncombe.

"I'm not sure if (tourism in Ontario) is too expensive or we need to market it better," said Mrs. Larcade. "We have to see what we have and see who we can sell it to."

In Vermont, Mr. Eastmure said, they're advertising snow, trying to capture the southern market which has never seen it. Perhaps the answer is to pick Floridians up at the Toronto airport, lend them some winter clothes, and take them skiing for a week.

This prompted Mr. McLean to note "we've got a big transportation problem. The bus lines are atrocious, with only one bus a day."

"People like convenience," Chamber director Bob Jennings agreed. And that's something Haliburton can't offer.

Former director Rhonda Elstone said that although there was a "great deal of resistance" in her tenure, perhaps it's time to market Haliburton as being close to something else, such as Canada's Wonderland. "If you're a business in Florida, no matter where you are you advertise as being close to Disney World. We should be more confident in our ability to have the people come here and go out to somewhere else for the day."

"We're next to Algonquin Park but how many of us push it," another man asked. If you meet a European tourist, they all want to see Algonquin Park, part of which is in the county.

"The problem with Haliburton is it doesn't have an image of its own," said Jean Edouard Larcade, one of the owners of the Domain of Killien Resort. Niagara-on-the-lake is known for its quaint, well-preserved buildings. Muskoka has an image of mahogany boats and old, monied cottages. Yet many people are finding Muskoka's shining veneer to be quite thin. "Behind the image, they don't find what they expect."

"We live here all the time and we don't see what we have. I wonder if we're trying to cater to too

Waste not, want not is taken to perfection

by MARTHA PERKINS

LITTLE THINGS, such as a spool of yellow thread or the way she pronounces her name, tell you a lot about Simone Harrison.

In the one-room converted shed she calls her home, from out of the mounds of old clothing Mrs. Harrison finds her sewing box. She wants to illustrate her point about how society's concepts of what's garbage differ from hers.

A woman had given her a fistful of thread ends. Could Mrs. Harrison use it as stuffing in one of the pin cushions she sells at local fairs?

"I found a better use for it," Mrs. Harrison says proudly as she unwinds the yellow thread. Every eight or 10 centimetres there's a knot: Mrs. Harrison has pulled out all the yellow bits from the mass of thread ends and knotted them together. Then, when she's sewing together her quilt pieces, she'll use this make-shift spool. "And my knot is already made," she says of her final triumph. "Praise that woman for bringing that to me."

Describing conversations she has with people, Mrs. Harrison pronounces her first name as "C-mahn." She prefers this to the normal pronunciation, which "makes me think of moaning and groaning." A complainer Simone Harrison will never be.

Given her living conditions, many would feel a few complaints are justified. Her house, formerly a shed, on Highway 35 at the corner of North Shore Road, seems barely eight feet by twenty. Her bed is her chesterfield, which is piled high with clothing people either want to throw out or have mended. There's not enough room for two people to pass if they want to sit on the couch, and when company arrives and sits on the only bare spot of couch, Mrs. Harrison pulls out a folding stool. The only personal possessions seem to be a sewing machine in front of the window, and a television, perched high above the piles.

Yet in conversation, Mrs. Harrison is always talking about the need to help the poor. Some people would think she's poor, she's told. Yes, some people have said that when they see where she lives, she says. But they're wrong.

"There are others who are in need of help and we could help them if we didn't waste," she says. "I've seen those World Vision children on television, skin and bones, starving to death."

In her own small way, Mrs. Harrison has discovered how she can help those less fortunate.

First of all, she hardly throws anything out — or lets others throw anything out.

"With what people call garbage, I practically live

Simone Harrison doesn't even like to waste space! Her small home, seen here from the far corner, is crammed full of clothes she will mend or make into quilts.

on it," she says. "People waste too much today. Things people call rags, just need some fixing. Someone gave me 21 pairs of pants to use to make quilts. 'I couldn't cut these up, they're just like new,' I said. I passed them on to Mr. Harding to help the poor."

Everitt Harding lives on North Shore Road and when his wife, Lorraine, was alive, used to take carloads of used clothing to Toronto. Now that his wife is gone and he is getting older, these trips are difficult. But the need is still there.

Many of the clothes filling Mrs. Harrison's home will be mended and donated to the Lily Ann, a charity clothes depot in Haliburton. Long sleeve shirts with the elbows worn out will become short sleeve shirts. Likewise, trousers will become shorts, and even some shirts will be cut up and sewn into men's boxer shorts.

Mrs. Harrison has even devised a little trick to give old socks new life. When the sole is worn out, she'll cut off the foot part, turn it around and sew it back onto the elasticized ankle. She takes off one of her own socks to show you how it's done. Then she rummages among the bags and pulls out a pair of short, green socks. They were once knee-highs with worn out soles. Now they reach halfway up the calf and are triple padded along the bottom. Anything that is unsalvageable will be cut up and used for quilts, which she also sells.

Whenever she has spare time, and wherever she is, Mrs. Harrison will have a needle in her hand. "What did God give us hands for? It wasn't to sit and twiddle our thumbs."

Not all of her mending is for the poor, however. A small sign posted in her window advertises her ability to mend and fix zippers.

"Someone said, 'Simone, you should ask for more money.' But if you charge too much, they'll say

'Might as well throw it out and buy something new.' "People feel today they have to wear things in style and I just feel with some of the styles today, I wouldn't wear them if they gave them to me," she says. "I'd rather take something second hand than buy it new."

Her interest in sewing began when she was a young girl. Her mother died when Simone was six and she went to live with her sister. "She'd sew and I'd sit and watch her. I started myself with dolls clothes. When I was older, I just got into sewing and never quit. I'm still working with my sewing machine."

It was also at a young age that she began caring for the poor. Mrs. Harrison's beliefs are often accompanied by Biblical sayings, her favourite of which is "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you."

That has led to some rather interesting interpretations.

For instance, Mrs. Harrison used to believe that when a grocery store had leftover vegetables and fruit, they could be exchanged for fresh produce. When someone told her this wasn't the way it worked, she approached Dave Dollo of Dollo's IGA in Minden.

Yes, Mr. Dollo told her, they have to throw out all the spoiled fruits and vegetables. This would never do, Mrs. Harrison says, shaking her head. "No, it's got to be used up, it's got to be used up. We throw out too many good things."

So she reached an agreement with Mr. Dollo. She would buy the produce that was beginning to spoil, the produce everyone else wouldn't buy because it was less than perfect. "But I told him 'You charge me so I know you can still make a profit.'" This wasn't charity, it was good business sense.

"It's not going to hurt me to eat carrots and parsnips one day when I might have wanted corn on the cob," she says of what she considers her small sacrifice. She'll do the same thing when she visits the butcher's and asks for the meat which will soon have to be thrown out.

"Pleasing man or pleasing God our Father, who was more thrilled with that taking of that piece of meat," she asks. The butcher is happy because he gets rid of things he otherwise would have to throw out, and God is happy because Mrs. Harrison is not wasting.

Perhaps if other people wasted less, they too would be more pleased with themselves and their lot in life. "People wouldn't be wanting more if they wouldn't be wasting it," she says. "That's just the way I was brought up."

Hallelujah.

With much sleuthing, Primrose Birrell gets revolutionary justice

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

AS THE RUSSIAN REVOLUTION continues its evolution of change, a Haliburton woman has finally won a battle left over from the Bolshevik uprising which started it all.

After three years of sleuthing and paper work, Primrose Birrell has been partly compensated for her family's losses following the 1917 revolution.

When Mrs. Birrell's grandfather, Sydney Herbert Bigsby, was born in Moscow, the British settlement was quite happy and prosperous. His family owned the Mamontov Paint and Varnish Works, a large factory just three miles from what's now known as Red Square. Another branch of the family owned the Deptford (England) Paint and Varnish Works, so it seems to be a profession passed on from generation to generation.

As a young man, Sydney met and married Sarah Helena Lehrs, who also lived in the British settlement. They had six children, but two girls died in infancy. The four children were Sydney (Jr.), Dorothy, Edgar and George, but Edgar would die in World War 1, fighting for the British.

In 1917, all semblances of happiness were destroyed. When the Bolsheviks took control of the government, they confiscated all property and assets owned by the British. Insult to injury was added when they wouldn't let the Bigsbys leave the country. Instead, he had to manage the factory for a few years before the government allowed him to move to India.

Shortly after the revolution, the elder Bigsby filed a claim asking for compensation. He said his assets, including an "extraordinary revolution tax of 15,000 rubles" and furniture at the family's country home or dachau, totalled 700,000 rubles, or in those days, 60,000 pounds.

(Before 1914, the exchange rate was 10 rubles to one pound. By 1922, the currency "was in such a mess", Mrs. Birrell says, a new ruble was introduced. One new ruble equalled 10,000 old rubles. The present day ruble is one-millionth of the pre-1914 ruble. A pound is worth roughly $2 Canadian.)

Nothing ever came of that claim during Mr. Bigsby's lifetime, and he died in England bitter and depressed about his family's change of fortunes.

His eldest son, also Sydney, managed to find another kind of happiness in India. An engineer, he gained the respect and admiration of many people in that country by overseeing irrigation and electricity projects. He married Evelyn, who like her mother, was born in India. They had two children, the late John Bigsby, and Primrose, who married Bruce Birrell, an English engineer and at that time, army officer. Their two oldest sons, Rodney and Tony (who has been written about previously in regards to his waterskiing accident and subsequent struggles) were born in India, while Sydney and Diana were born in Sarnia, Ontario. (The Birrells later moved to Pakistan before returning to Canada.)

"My parents never talked about Russia at all, I guess it was a sad topic," Mrs. Birrell says. "When I was a young girl, I was so desperately shy and introspective I didn't think about finding out more about my family."

Mrs. Birrell's father was an amazing man who spoke English, Russian, German and Hindi. For nine years he was the state engineer for Jaipur, where many of his projects are still in evidence. He was also briefly in charge of the Ministry of Defense.

When World War II broke out, he signed up with the British army and was sent to report on Singapore and Tobruk, where he was captured and later escaped. The challenges of war caught up with him, however, and he died one year after the war ended.

His widow was a vivacious, beautiful woman whom Sarah Bernhardt had once tried to convince to become an actress when they were both students in England. A popular family story tells of the day Mrs. Bigsby was riding on an elephant's back during a hunting expedition. A tiger charged the elephant, fastening its claws on the elephant's trunk. After the tiger was forced away, Evelyn Birrell got down and began applying the family's favourite ointment onto the elephant's wounds. This prompted harsh criticism from her family, because the tiger was still in the area, but her main concern was for her elephant's wellbeing. Later, the elephant was taking part in a special parade. When it saw Mrs. Bigsby, it broke away and went to see her.

But back to 1946. Devastated by her husband's death, Evelyn Bigsby burnt all the photographs and mementoes from Russia. "I think she felt the Russian episode would cause the family nothing but sorrow."

Initially she moved to England. "Then she went to Jamaica because she craved the sunshine but she got ill" and had to return to England where she lived with her son George. However, an eye problem

'My parents never talked about Russia at all. I guess it was a sad topic,' says Primrose Birrell, who used this book to help her trace her family's history.

necessitated the wearing of an eye patch and she reacted by going into seclusion.

"It's like a concert pianist who once she retires, never plays again," says Mr. Birrell. A beauty, his mother-in-law could not accept being less than beautiful. She died in Bath, England, at the age of 82.

Meanwhile, after attending girls school in England, young Primrose returned to India where she met Bruce Birrell, who was an officer in the British army.

Before their retirement to Soyars Lake several years ago, Mrs. Birrell worked for the Ontario Medical Association. One day in 1987, she phoned a Scottish friend who worked there.

"Have you heard," the friend said. "On television, there was a program about the British government agreeing with Mr. Gorbachev" about compensation for property lost during the revolution.

It appears that for 70 years, the British government had been arguing that the Soviet government owed 900-million pounds to the British — 400-million to British people and 500-million to the government. However, the Soviets had always countered that Britain owed it 2-billion pounds for damage caused by British intervention in their country between 1918 and 1922.

The British had a trump card. Immediately after the revolution, the British government had seized what is now 45-million pounds in Imperial Russian government accounts. In 1986, Soviet foreign minister Eduard Shevardnadze agreed to have that money spent on compensation as long as the British government waived its claim to its 500-million pounds, which would now be worth 46-billion pounds.

Russian claim leads to family discoveries

By the time Mrs. Birrell heard about the agreement, the deadline for application was six weeks away. Hurriedly, she phoned the British High Commission Office in Ottawa and they arranged to have an application sent to her. Because of a postal strike, she had to courier it to England.

But before the claim would be accepted, she also had to prove that her grandfather had also made a claim. Her son Sydney Birrell phoned London and after a lot of digging, got a copy of the claim Sydney Bigsby had filled out in 1918. With just a few days to go and the strike still raging on, Mrs. Birrell couriered the information to the claimant's office.

A few weeks later, she received a letter saying the claim had been registered but now her real work would begin: Mrs. Birrell had to find copies of all the wills of Sydney Bigsby and his descendants.

The eldest generation was no problem. Her grandfather's possessions went to his wife. She left everything to her youngest son George, except for a gold ring which was supposed to go to Mrs. Birrell and which has never been seen.

Her father's will was harder to trace since he died in India and records are not well kept there. However, it was eventually found and revealed he had left everything to his wife. Her will left everything to her five grandchildren: Mrs. Birrell's four children and her nephew.

There was still a missing piece, and it would turn out to be quite critical. Mrs. Birrell's Aunt Dorothy had married William Wartz and moved to South Africa. Mrs. Wartz left everything to her husband. When he died, he left everything to his family except for what he called his wife's "German claim." British officials interpreted this to mean any proceeds from Russia.

This money was left to his wife's mysterious nephew, Reginald Ivor Bigsby. George Bigsby, Mrs. Birrell's uncle, first married Lola. She divorced him and he married a "Russian lady" who had a son. Mr. Bigsby adopted her son, who was named Reginald Ivor Bigsby. The adopted son was willed all of his parents' possessions, plus his Aunt Dorothy's "German claim".

This entitled Reginald Bigsby to two-thirds of Mrs. Birrell's Russian claim. Now she had to find him. Letters to his father's last address, 82 Canterbury Street, went unanswered.

Through a long and roundabout way, Mrs. Birrell sent letters to all the executors of Lola Bigsby's will. One of them, a Mr. Spicer, wrote her back with some extraordinary news. Mr. Spicer had gone to 82 Canterbury Street and found Reginald Bigsby at home. He told Mr. Bigsby about Mrs. Birrell and her claim, and Mr. Bigsby said he would contact her. He never did. And when Mrs. Birrell's nephew, who lives in London, went to visit Mr. Bigsby, Mr. Bigsby was never at home. Effectively, he therefore forfeited any part of the claim.

So when the Bigsby descendants were awarded 8,858.42 pounds, Mrs. Birrell's claim was only one-third, or 2,657.53 pounds. That meant each of her children and her nephew received 531.50 pounds.

More money was forthcoming when all the established claims were paid. "The remaining balance was shared pro rata between those claimants resulting in a final payment of 2,195.12 pounds, or 439.03 pounds each."

Although disappointed by the amount, and disapproving that she, the only claimant, was entitled to only one third, Mrs. Birrell thinks her persistence has been worthwhile. (Her thorough record-keeping was commended by the British claims office.)

"It's been a fascinating exercise because I've learned so much about my family," she says. One discovery was a cousin, who had also made a claim on the Russian fortunes. However, Chris Bigsby, whom Mrs. Birrell went to visit during the process, was a descendent of the Deptford Bigsby's paint and varnish company.

And it's with pride and a sense of justice being done that she views the settlement, small as it was. "As my mother said, 'It's better than a poke in the eye with a burnt stick.'"

Haliburton should promote its natural beauty

many people at the same time. Let's see who we want to bring here."

We can also learn from Muskoka's mistakes, he added. "We've got what Muskoka had 100 years ago" — clean and quiet lakes, beautiful forests, and serenity. "What we have is Nature and, for a few years, seclusion and peace. People cannot have that anywhere else."

Mr. Duncombe mentioned a recent camping trip at the Haliburton Forest and Wildlife Reserve near KENNIS Lake. No motor boats are allowed and "in half an hour, you can be at the edge of the earth."

"What's wrong with marketing us as an alternative to 'the other place'?" Mr. Eastmure said, referring to Muskoka. A few years ago, the province was fostering an image of Accessible Wilderness. Maybe that could be borrowed as Haliburton's slogan.

Mr. McLean closed the pre-dinner discussion by talking about the Chamber's newest way of marketing the area. Together with Deborah Dahlke, Mr. McLean is working on a travel guide which will replace the lure brochure. Writers such as Pierre Berton, Percy Rowe and Steve Veal have already agreed to write brief essays. This gives people something they'll want to read, not just filler between the ads. As well, some of the travel writers are bound to write stories about the Highlands in other publications.

As everyone headed inside to enjoy the buffet, conversation was animated. The evening, the first of its kind arranged by the Chamber, had brought people together and encouraged them to share their ideas. Such gatherings might not put money in the pockets of tourists, but they help local businesses find ways to convince tourists that what dollars they have are best spent in the Highlands.

Dear PC. Friends:

Thank you very much for your hard work on the campaign.

Many hours of hard work go into an election campaign. I would like to thank you for your personal support of my candidacy.

Our system of government allows us to work on election campaigns to elect candidates of our choice. It was an honour and a privilege to be the PC. candidate in our riding.

I hope we will keep in touch even though the campaign is over.

Please feel free to contact me at anytime if I can be of any help.

Sincerest best wishes

Poll results show village is in tune with province

WILBERFORCE NEWS

by: WINNIE SCHOFIELD

Concerning the restaurant soon to be opened at the corner of Fleming Road and Highway 648: it is to be operated by Joanne and Bernard Olszewski and Harry and Mary Dale. Their intention is to serve good, wholesome meals in a family-style atmosphere. In a few weeks they hope to be open. More details later on this.

Congratulations to Pat and Doug Tallman of Pickering on the arrival of their first child, a handsome boy born at the North York hospital on Aug. 29th. Jesse William weighed 8 lb. 4 oz. and is a grandson for Marion and Karl Tallman of Wilberforce and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Burk of Ingoldsby.

Competing in the Bancroft Ladies Softball League, the team from Wilberforce reports a very good season. The unfortunate loss of some good players at the end of the season may have contributed to the B Championship being won by Vito's of Bancroft. Jerry Fagoner, popular coach, will be ready next year for future spirited games.

Voters in Monmouth Township were in accordance with the majority of Ontario citizens in choosing a new party for the Queen's Park Legislature. Poling stations 16 and 17 in Wilberforce registered 156 votes for NDP representative Dennis Drainville, 28 for Liberal Pat O'Reilly, 60 for Cons. Ron Jenkins, 24 for Family Coalition Brad Med, 5 for independent Hugh Boyd and 7 for Libertarian Ron Hawkrigg. The trend continued in Tory Hill where at Pole 15 the results were: NDP 66, Liberal 24, Conservative 26, Family Coalition 11 and Independent 1. Slightly over 50 percent of eligible voters cast their ballot.

Canada Post has issued some interesting and colourful stamps this Summer. Prehistoric Life in Canada is featured in four fossil stamps. Another set depicts forest regions of red spruce, white pine, Douglas fir and red cedar. September brings a weather stamp commemorating 150 years of weather observing in Canada while the latest stamp recognizes the 1990 Literacy Year and shows a bird with outstretched wings comprised of symbols, numerals and letters from several different alphabets. These are all 39 cent stamps and are available at your Post Office.

No Fair or parade would be complete without the presence of Clarence Rowbottom. Clarence, who hails from Essonville, is the greatest crowd-pleaser this area has produced. Although his talents in singing and guitar playing have at times been questioned, his happy countenance and self assurance delights everyone and his performance is greeted with thunderous applause from the audience. The numerous ribbons he has received for his efforts have reinforced his confidence in his ability to entertain. Some of these were rewards from Country Good Times, Coe Hill festival and Kinmount Fair. He was seen with an entry in the Haliburton parade and is considering a trip to Lindsay when their Fair opens. At the Agricultural Fair in Wilberforce he entered his black and white dog, named King, in the dog show filled with pedigreed poodles. King carried off the first class ribbon for the dog with the longest tail. Clarence just can't lose. Good luck to this lively entertainer.

Playing the lottery game brings few rewards but occasionally perseverance pays off. We were happy to hear that Karl had a very nice win on Sat. Couldn't happen to a nicer fellow.

The week of Sept. 16th, designated as Legion Week, will bring something for everyone to our local Branch 624 Legion Hall. Sunday 16th provides entertainment for seniors, the beginning of numerous activities planned for the week. Telephone Joyce Gillies at 448-2193 for further details.

Birthday chauffeured in

KINMOUNT & AREA NEWS

by: MILLIE MOSS

Intended for last week

Belated happy birthday wishes to Eleanor Bray of Keswick who celebrated her 72nd on Thursday, August 23 while holidaying for a month with her daughter and son-in-law, Jim and Eileen Greenslade at their Kinmount home. The birthday lady enjoyed her special day with her sister Hilda and her husband Les Gage of Beaverton, another sister Mrs. Margaret Stoddart of Toronto and friends Don and Betty Varg Den Hazel of Gooderham. The family had a surprise for Eleanor's birthday in the form of a beautiful limousine which was chauffeured by Kim Henderson of Kinmount who took all of them on a tour of the Minden Lookout and area and down through Miners Bay, then back to the Greenslade home for tea and refreshments. Eleanor received lots of nice gifts, one of them a coffee cup with the inscription "thirty-ninth birthday — again" on it.

The Galway Firefighters will host a Monte Carlo night at the Galway Hall on Saturday, September 22 beginning at 8 p.m.

Happy birthday to Roy Ash on August 27 and to Frank Jilley on September 5, both of Newfoundland. Clyde Parry of Lindsay also on September 5

A WINNER ON WEDNESDAY: The Haliburton Highlands Guild of Fine Arts held the first draw of the second season of Winning Wednesdays on, that's right, Wednesday, at the Bank of Montreal. The tickets may be $100, but only 200 are sold and there are 50 draws for $100 before the grand prize draw of $5,000 next year. Here, Steve Peters, the bank's outgoing loans and mortgages manager, pulls the winning ticket — it had Mary Stacey of Haliburton Lake's name on it. Flanking him are organizers Wendy Wilkins, left, and May Waddell.

Legion gets an attractive new look

WILBERFORCE LEGION

BRANCH 624
by: Edwin Scott

Douglas C. Hatch Branch 624 has the welcome mat out for new members Elwood Jones, Joan Wilson, Rex Wilson, Kathleen Whitefield and Cecil Compton.

Jim Driscoll and Bill Brooks did a very neat job in removing a portion of the wall between the lounge and the club room. The area involved now appears more spacious. A committee has been appointed to investigate and report on the requirements to transform our lounge in the style of an English pub.

Emerson Compton has donated a stereo and two speakers, and we are hoping that on Friday and Saturday nights the music will induce our members and their guests to swing and sway, rock 'n' roll or whatever! Emerson has also donated a dart board to the Branch.

Legion Week is from September 16th to 22nd, and we are having "Open House" at Branch 624. Our planned activities are as follows: Sunday Sept. 16: Seniors Day 1:00 to 4:00 p.m.—darts, cards, shuffle board, pool—or just socializing; Monday Sept. 17: Bingo 7:30 p.m. then a light lunch; Tuesday Sept. 18: General meeting at 7:30 p.m. followed by the movie "Driving Miss Daisy" and popcorn; Wednesday, Sept. 19: Darts 7:30 p.m.—we need more players—cheese and crackers served; Thursday Sept. 20: Euchre 7:30 p.m., followed by a light lunch; Friday Sept. 21: Hootenanny 8:00 p.m.—bring your musical instruments and/or voice; Saturday Sept. 22: Western Night—cowboy hats and clothes—4:00 to 6:00 p.m.—toss a dart—win a turkey or ham!; 6:00 to 8:00 p.m. BBQ'd roast beef dinner—$8.00. Be Sure To Purchase Your Tickets No Later Than Thursday September 20th.; 9:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m. Dancing to the music provided by Minden's own Joey Nicholson; Sunday, Sept. 23: District "F" Drumhead Service at Peterborough.

Our General Meetings are now normally held on the third Tuesday of each month at 8:00 p.m., and all members are welcome.

SECTION 3

There's this story about a dog...

by SALLY RITCHIE

Staff Reporter

"Yr wy'n edvaru cymaint a'r gwr a laddodd ei Vilgi" ("I repent as much as the man who slew his greyhound")—Welsh proverb.

WHAT DOES THE PRETTY HAMLET of Gelert have to do with this proverb? To find out, one must make a voyage of discovery across continents, history and cultural imaginations.

A good place to start is in Beddgelert, Wales. One thing anyone who has visited both the British Isles and Haliburton will recognize is the number of Celtic namesakes in Canada's own highlands. For example, Snowdon, Carnarvon, Monmouth and Cardiff exist in both Haliburton and Wales. So the similarity between Gelert and Beddgelert bears some examination.

And this is where the fun begins: a Welsh legend breathes romantic life into the connection. The details vary from source to source; the Encyclopaedia Britannica has a slightly different version than does a tourist brochure. At any rate, as you will see, the specifics are not all that significant.

In the thirteenth century, Llewelyn, Prince of North Wales, had a palace at Beddgelert. Llewelyn was the son-in-law of King John. Legend has it that John gave Llewelyn a greyhound as a gift. This faithful companion was named Gelert.

One day the prince went hunting without Gelert who was unaccountably missing; an unusual occurrence. On Llewelyn's return, he found Gelert beside his son's crib: the dog was blood-covered and ragged, yet greeted his master eagerly. Llewelyn saw in an instant that his son's empty crib was also covered in blood. Panic and horror rising in his heart, he feared Gelert had killed his son and plunged his sword into the dog's heart. Gelert's dying yelp was answered by a child's cry. After a brief search, Llewelyn found his son unharmed—lying next to the body of a wolf, slain by the ferociously protective Gelert.

Llewelyn, filled with remorse, never smiled again. Gelert is supposed to have been buried near the village of Beddgelert, where his tomb is a popular

... but it's not just any dog. The Celtic tale of Beddgelert is not just any story either tourist attraction. Beddgelert is said to mean "grave of Gelert".

It's a wonderful story, isn't it? Bittersweet, heart-rending, filled with great details. And it has a wonderful moral lesson, warning against thoughtless, spontaneous action.

Well, it should be a good story. As Tom Dawson, a real life resident of Haliburton's Gelert explains, it has a rich, rewarding history. The legend, he says, is merely the tip of the iceberg.

Dawson heard the story from friends, and was so intrigued that he began a search for its background. It is, he found, as fascinating as the story itself.

The Encyclopaedia Britannica says the story is the Welsh version of a tale which is traced to the Indian Panchatantra, perhaps as long ago as 200 B.C. Now you know the beginning and the end: the middle part is infinitely more satisfying.

Dawson's investigation of the story led him to a book by Joseph Jacobs, "Celtic Fairy Tales." The book is interesting, but Dawson's re-telling of its information brings it to life. When he talked to The Echo about it, the essence of the verbal tradition—which is an integral element of the legend—enveloped the imagination in the romantic haze of the tales told around round tables. Dwarfs, gnomes, dragons, heroes and heroines crept out of the woods to hear his story—they didn't care that he was telling the cold, hard facts. They simply wanted to listen to a good story.

"There's some things you have to understand about the culture," Dawson begins, the intensity of his fascination furrowing his brow, "that make the story make sense."

He talks of the bards of the Middle Ages, whose professional story-telling often took the form of ballads or songs. "The oral tradition in the Celtic

'To a North American, it sounds weird, but in the folk tale atmosphere, it makes sense,' say Tom and Diane Dawson, who want to promote Gelert's link with the old Celtic tale.

All the dogs in Gelert, such as Louise Weber's, at right, will take on a mythical value when the story of Llewelyn and his faithful pet become better known.

culture was very strong. They followed patterns and had common elements," he says, adding the stories pop up in different forms in different parts of Europe and elsewhere.

It is this thread of similarity in different stories that links the old Indian tale with the legend of Gelert. Throughout history, Dawson says, stories have passed from culture to culture by word of mouth. With a verbal transmission of a story, details change, as anyone who has ever played the children's games of Telephone, Whisper or I've Got a Secret will know. Nonetheless, Dawson stresses, the core of the story remains the same.

As Dawson speaks his excitement builds. He talks about the westward movement of stories, which were carried by men's tongues from India to Persia to Europe and the Aryan cultures. He talks about how some tales have Greek and Roman roots. Aesop's Fables (which are supposed to have originated in the sixth century B.C.) are a good example.

He talks about how the various influences changed the stories. The pre-Christian influence in many tales is still evident, he says, although the details were changed by the Christians to conform with new moral codes. The Crusades brought tales that were Oriental in origin to the west, accommodating the details to the Occidental mind and culture.

And he talks about the different cultural imaginations which embraced the stories and legends. "Heroes, maidens, fairy creatures, drolls, gnomes were very common in Gaelic literature," he says. Another common element in the Celtic culture was the idea of the master and faithful hound.

One popular story which highlights this latter feature is that of Cylart, a dog which was supposed to have run from Beddgelert to Caernarvon in pursuit of a stag. It ran the stag down, and promptly died. "As far as this culture was concerned, this dog was worthy of a story," Dawson says enthusiastically. A monument to Cylart was erected in Carnarvon. "To a North American, it sounds weird, but in the folk tale atmosphere, this culture placed emphasis on heroes, kings...in this context, it makes sense."

"To the vast majority of people, this romantic world has disappeared," he says, adding it is resurrected in fairy tales like Aesop's Fables. Adults, however, want a more logical, realistic strain to their stories, he says.

"But originally," he continues, "these stories were made for adults...as moral lessons to teach a value system." The lesson behind the legend of Gelert, for example, is not to behave in a precipitous or hasty manner.

However, the Gelert legend has reached the western mind in another form, Dawson points out. The legend of Gelert is clearly Indian in origin: "The idea of an animal sacrificing itself for a human is a Buddhist concept." The earliest version of the story is found in the translated version of Vinaya Pitaka, which is "presumably Indian folklore in a written form."

So how does one bring all these bits of information together? By understanding the interconnection between all the different ages and cultures, Dawson says. "Because of the Crusades, Western civilization invaded cultures they'd never known before."

The Indian tale next showed up in Europe in "Seven Sages of Rome" using the same theme, but different characters and details. Then it turned up in England in a Latin book called "Gesta Romanorum" as "The Story of Folliculus." The sequence and timeframe of events fires Dawson's imagination: "If I drew a map and plotted this, it's mind-boggling."

Alright. We're still waiting for the Gelert connection. "Finally, the Welsh people got hold of the story, God knows how," Dawson says. "The average peasant was illiterate, so they weren't aware it existed previously...(to them) it was totally a Welsh story."

But how did the legend become so localized, and why is there a grave at Beddgelert if it is only a story?

First off, it is necessary to realize that the name Beddgelert has nothing whatsoever to do with the legend of Gelert. Contrary to popular tradition, the Welsh village is named after a nearby Augustinian

PEOPLE

Halls are alive with the sounds of students

STUDENT LIFE AT HHSS
by: ERIN LYNCH

THE HALLWAYS are once again thronging and the classrooms that were empty only two weeks ago are filled with eager or not so eager learners. Another school year has started; nothing has changed drastically, but there have been some new rules and regulations. There is a no smoking area on the school property this year. Students wishing to smoke must go on the sidewalk in front of the football field or across the road. There may be some trouble trying to enforce such a rule and many detentions and suspensions may be issued. Another new rule is the late rule. Students are allowed to be late only twice in a term. The third late arrival in a term brings an automatic three detentions. Late four times in a term and parents are notified and two weeks of detentions are issued. We have many new faces in the school this year, besides the 'minor niners' who are always easy to spot with their almost lost, innocent look as they walk down the middle of the hallway trying to dodge six foot tall football players before making it to class. We have two exchange students who will be fortunate enough to stay the year in Haliburton, Alex Kundoch who is from Germany and Anette Busk-Rasmussen from Denmark. I am sure they will enjoy their year; after all Haliburton can't be that much of a culture shock. Besides having new students we have a number of new teachers: Miss Boatman who teaches History and English; Miss Hawthorne, Family Studies; Mr. Winston, Building Shop; Miss MacDonnell, Math; Mr. Regina, Music; Miss Steen, French; and Mrs. Shaperia, History and English. All the best of luck to you for your first year at HHSS. The new school year is a little more than a week old and sport teams and clubs are already starting: football, field hockey, yearbook, soccer, and the cross country running team. The best way to enjoy your year is to get involved as much as possible. Next Friday is a big day at the high school: red and white day. That means dress in your school colours. The annual VIP barbecue will be held at lunchtime. After lunch there is a pep rally and then everyone is let out to watch the first football game. That evening there is a victory dance!

Gelert story changes with the nationality of its tellers

Abbey. The story next shows up in Welsh literature as Fables of Cattwg in the 1500s. It was such a well-known and widespread story that was adopted as a national crest (with a dog sitting in a cradle atop a coronet) in the time of Richard III. "In the midst of all this glamour and colour and Englishman stepped in," Dawson says, emphasizing the distinction between the Welsh and English ways of thinking. The man, E. Jones, describes the story of Cylart the dog in his book "Musical Relicks of the Welsh Bards" written in 1784. In the second edition of his book, Jones added the legend of Gelert erecting it thus: "This so grieved the Prince, that he erected a tomb over his faithful dog's grave; where afterwards the parish church was built and goes by that name—Bedd Cilhart, of the grave of Kill-hart in Carnarvonshire." According to author Joseph Jacobs, Jones merely connected all kinds of details about the legend of a faithful dog and hasty master to the monument of Cylart, and existence of Llewelyn. According to Jacobs, another man, Mr. Spencer, "took the legend from Jones, enshrined it in his somewhat banal verses, which were lucky enough to be copied into several reading books, and thus became known to all English-speaking folk." Now, upon hearing the legend, all these English people went to Beddgelert to see the grave, which was of course, non-existent. Until an entrepreneurial landlord decided to change things. A guide to North Wales, written by Murray (Jacobs gives no further details) "the landlord of the Goat Inn felt compelled by the cravings of tourists to invent a grave." So there we have it. The intangible becomes tangible. Despite our emphasis on the concrete, we live in a two dimensional world, Dawson says. We have the visible, tangible world of material reality—and we have the invisible world of religion, morals, and spiritual magic. (He emphasizes that he is referring only to the "good" world of magic, not the occult.) If one looks at the Haliburton's Gelert, he says, you can either see it as the worn-out shadow of its formerly vibrant self. But if you look at it in the invisible dimension, of the legend, he says, there is a different perception. "If you look at it in terms of the tale...it's powerful." Dawson believes the legend and its connection with Gelert should be emphasized. "I think it's really appropriate that the story stopped in Wales for so long and somebody transported it here to this little town," he says. Standing guard at one doorway of Dawson's business, the Sugar Shack, are two concrete dogs. He would like to see one of them one day become part of a monument which explains the legend, so tourists can come and find a tangible connection to the intangible tale. "There really is something neat here worth accentuating."

IN SEARCH OF MONSTERS: Story teller John Batt was in Haliburton last week, an unlikely place to find the Loch Ness Monster's two descendents which escaped into Esson Lake. Helping him with his search is some state-of-the-art technology: A Radio Sonic Reverberator, which sonically reproduces the monsters' mating call; a Nouse nes; pre-stressed extra tensile deep water netting; and Loch Ness spongoli. Details of his exploits were in County Life a few weeks ago.

Missing girl found

DORSET NEWS
by: PHYLLIS BRISCOE

Intended for last week Birthday wishes for a happy one go to Sandra Austin, who will be 10 years old on Sept. 10th. Many happy returns and best wishes to Walt Taylor who will be celebrating on Sept. 11th. We had a near tragedy in the area last week when a 14-year-old girl left her parents' cottage on Kawagama Lake for a walk. She became disoriented and wandered for over three miles in dense bush for two days and one night. Fortunately, the event had a happy ending, as the young lady was discovered, apparently none the worse for her experience. The search included many local volunteers, the Dorset Fire Dept., Police helicopters, O.P.P. and a canine unit. They are all to be commended.

Summer is over and Labour Day has passed us by for another year. The youngsters are back in school and I am sure there are many Moms who shed a tear when there little ones went off for the first school day. However, they start being away from home so early nowadays, first daycare, junior kindergarten and so on that maybe the trauma isn't so great. The situation has changed so much in the last 10 or 15 years.

day holiday weekend at North Bay. They stayed one night and spent two nights and days at Sudbury. The group went sight seeing at the Nickel Mines and the copper mines and saw "Science North." Sincere sympathy to the family of Lillian (Carson) Brown who passed away last week. Lillian was a retired school teacher, and had lived on the Carson farm, opposite the entrance

COMMUNITY NEWS

September is abuzz

Church gathers to discuss future

LEGION NEWS

by: MABEL BRANNIGAN

September is an extremely busy month for Branch 129. A large number from the Branch along with the Haliburton Legion Pipe Band and colour party attended the Kilmount Fair parade.

Our general meetings have started again. The next general meeting will be on October 4 at 8:00 p.m., and our next Executive meeting will be on September 20. It is moved one week ahead so that chairmen of committees may attend the District seminars in Lindsay on September 27.

Mr. G. Barker, The D.V.A. representative, will be at the Branch on October 30. Please call Lloyd Whitaker at 457-1093 for an appointment between 10:00 and noon.

More Coboconk news...

A baby shower for baby Paige Spry daughter of Dean and his wife was held at the home of Pastor Pat Walsh recently.

The first Hirstwood reunion was held on Buller Rd. on Sunday, Sept. 2. Some 54 people were in attendance.

The United Senior Citizens of Ontario held a convention at London, Ont. recently. Eight of the Coboconk Seniors attended the Aug. 27th, 28th and 29th convention where many of the seniors concerns were discussed.

Cde. Doreen is still attending at the Branch to answer questions for seniors from 4:30 to 5:00 p.m. Doreen Hawman is most knowledgeable on questions of this nature. please do not hesitate to contact her. Everything is confidential.

Congratulations to Jim Lee and Jack Delorme who were the lucky clubroom winners last week. Also, the hand made rug donated by Lorna and Bill Ramsey was won by Bonnie Walling, and the hand crafted rocking horse was won by Barry Purpura.

Four of our members attended the Zone F4 council meeting held last Saturday in Fenelon Falls. The Zone F4 Convention will be hosted by Minden this year, and will be held on September 30, at 1:00 p.m. Please let the Haliburton president or Manager Jim know if you are going. It is necessary to have this information to let the Ladies know how many to prepare for.

A most important event is coming up on September 16 — the first day of Legion Week. We will form up at the Legion at 10:30 for our church parade. Those who cannot walk will be meeting us at St. George's Anglican Church for the 11:00 a.m. service. We will return to the Branch for a social time and a luncheon which is being sponsored jointly by the Branch and the Ladies Auxiliary. Several civic, provincial and federal representatives will be here as guests, along with a Legion provincial officer. Most members are asking "why?" or "what is the occasion?" All that I can say is that it will be worthwhile for both Branch and Ladies Auxiliary members to be here.

The District Drumhead is being held in Peterborough September 23. Our own band will be piling the drums at this service. They are widely known for doing this with the greatest precision, and it is a great performance to watch. A bus will be leaving the Branch at 10:30 a.m. Please sign up in the clubroom.

We are invited to attend Memorial services for Remembrance Day in Brechin on October 21, and in Minden on November 4. Further details will be available later.

Commanding Officer Lieut. D. J. Allaire of the 1129 Army Cadet Corps attended our general meeting and outlined the cadet program. Have your children or grandchildren signed up with the cadets yet?

The Ladies Auxiliary are busy catering this month to many functions. Fourteen of the women are attending their Provincial Convention in Sudbury this week. Their next flea market will be held on Saturday of Thanksgiving weekend. Don't miss it.

CARNARVON NEWS

by: ANN McKAY

The U.C.W. met at the home of Mabel Russell on Wednesday afternoon, with a good turnout. Mrs. Bishop has been a member for many years, we honored her with a corsage and birthday cake. Her family is asking friends and relatives to come to the C.E. Building on Sunday Sept. 23rd from 2 to 4 p.m. to help celebrate her 90th birthday.

Mr. and Mrs. Gregory Moore have returned to St. Catharines after spending the Summer here.

Donna Thomas of Oshawa was home with her parents, Bud and Diane for the weekend.

Wednesday night a congregational meeting was held in the C.E. Building to discuss the recent decision of the Human Sexuality issue of the United Church. Quite a few people expressed their feelings. I came away with the feeling that with that many people attending and interested, our Church is alive and well.

The congratulations of the Community to Kevin Barnhart, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Barnhart, and Cassandra Hubercheck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Hubercheck of the Mill Pond Restaurant and Roger Thomas and Nancy Chappel. Both couples were united in marriage on Saturday.

Mr. Amos Miscoe is a patient in the Hamilton General Hospital. At this time I have no word on his condition, but on a happier note Bert Gilles had come through surgery successfully at Toronto's Sunnybrook Hospital and his expected home any day.

Intended for last week

Mrs. Frances Thomas, Doris Redner, Shirley Edwards and Betty Davis were in Kirkfield visiting with the Albert Davis family. Albert is now in a Toronto hospital. We hope he gets well quickly and can return home.

Mr. Eric Cowan of Brampton has been spending some time with Bob and Grace Cowan.

Home with parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sinclair Russell, for the holiday weekend were Mr. and Mrs. Neil Russell of Ottawa and Ron Russell of Baltimore U.S.A.

We are pleased to have Highway 118 past our door paved at last. It is much quieter and far less dusty. Now if we could only get traffic lights instead of a flashing light at 118 and 35. It is the most dangerous corner in Haliburton County

Staying with the Alan Thomas's for the weekend were Morley Edwards and son Jason of Niagara Falls. Garth and Helen Windsor spent a few days in their Motor-home and visited with family in Haileybury then travelling through New Liskeard into Quebec and down to Belleville to visit more of their family.

We wish a good year to all of the school children and young adults in their new classes and a word to drivers to watch for little ones in their first year.

Spending time in St. Catharines this week were Mr. and Mrs. Dave Bell over the weekend and Mrs. Bill McKay and Mrs. Greg Moore during the week.

WEST GUILFORD NEWS

by: ELEANOR COOPER

Marilyn Berry and son Kristian recently travelled down east with Paula Kirschner (formerly of the Irish Line) who had been visiting relatives in Pickering. They found the contrast of farm land interesting from the long strips of farms in Quebec to the hillsides farmed in New Brunswick. Their time in Nova Scotia was spent at Paula's home in Shelburne. Their return trip was by train.

Farewell to the Wilsons, Jennifer, Dory, Hollis and Alexandra, who are moving to Calgary and will be sorely missed by the Holly Sissons and by the congregation at St. Andrew's.

Congratulations to Ted and Carol Duncan on their 48th anniversary in August, 1990.

Congratulations to Wendy and Jeff Norton who were married at the West Guilford Gospel Chapel on Sept. 1, 1990. Wendy's parents are Elsie and Ben Reynolds and Jeff is the son of Bruce and Pat Vorton. The wedding reception was held for the many guests at the Stanhope Community Centre.

A very successful benefit dance was held at the Centre on Saturday evening for Jamie Paradie who has had a serious industrial accident. Wade Stamp and Neilson Sisson organized the event. Many talented local musicians provided entertainment during the evening.

Debbie and Darren Sisson are visiting Norma and Ray Sisson prior to the four of them travelling out to Darren's home in Alberta.

WE WOULD LIKE to express our sincere thanks and appreciation to everyone who attended the Jack and Jill held in our honour on August 31st. We would especially like to thank family and friends for putting on the special event for us. — Love, Scott and Dawn.
27-P-12

WE WISH TO Thank everyone who participated in the celebration of our 40th wedding anniversary on August 19. Special thanks to our children and their families who arranged everything, to the ladies of the Carnarvon U.C.W. who looked after providing and serving the lunch; to John Eakins and the Government of Ontario for the lovely scrolls sent to us and to all our neighbours, friends and relatives who sent cards and attended the open house. It was a very pleasant day for us. Alice and Bill Chambers.
27-P-12

MANY HEARTFELT THANKS to Dr. Moga and staff at Haliburton Hospital for their tender, loving care of Glenn Lee Jr. — Glenn Jr. and Sr., Carol and Jan Lee.

MANY THANKS to all who assisted the Haliburton & District Lions Club with their many Community Projects this past year. Also thanks to all volunteers who assisted at many functions. Your valuable time was very much appreciated. Thank you to all who purchased tickets etc., this money helps with community work. Another year for us starts now and our meetings are the 2nd & 4th Thursday every month at 7 o'clock. Anyone is welcome to come. We love to have company. Please call Lion Ken 448-2833 or myself 448-2493 for more information. 1st meeting for this year is Sept. 13th 1990. Again, many thanks from all Lions Members for your support. President Ev.

THANK YOU

WE WISH to thank the many kind people who touched our lives at the time of Marie's illness and death. Thanks to the many friends and neighbours for cards, food, inquiries and messages of sympathy. Thanks to the Gordon A. Monk Funeral Home, Minden for kind and helpful service; to Rev. Moll for the beautiful service conducted by him and for his message of comfort and hope to our family during a very sorrowful time for us; to the ladies of the United church in Gooderham for the delicious lunch served following the service; and to the ladies of the Pentecostal Church in Gooderham for their prayers and the Gideon Memorial Bibles provided in memory of Marie. It was comforting to know so many cared. Frank Traviss & family.
